ITEMS WITHOUT DEWEY CLASSIFICATION (899)

The New Zealand National Bibliography (NZNB) contains catalogue records for the New Zealand imprint. It is produced monthly (12 issues per year). The National Library of New Zealand has responsibility for producing the Bibliography. Most of the material listed is received by the National Library of New Zealand under the Legal Deposit provisions of the National Library Act 1965, Section 30A, amended 1994. It includes New Zealand and Tokelau books, serials, newspapers, music, maps, videos, sound recordings, kits, and pictures. Items are included after they have been received at the National Library. The catalogue records produced meet international standards.

This document contains all the items that have been catalogued during the month of April 2018. The items are grouped under the main subject schedules of the Dewey Decimal Classification system. Within each subject grouping the items are arranged alphabetically by title.
Title  A way with words : a memoir of writing & publishing in New Zealand / Chris Maclean.
Author  Maclean, Chris, author.
ISBN  0947503609
        9780947503604
Physical Details  210 pages : illustrations (some colour) ; 26 cm
Summary  "From an early age, author and publisher Chris Maclean was told he had a way with words. This talent, which protected him from school bullies and made him a proficient debater, later became the focus of his professional life. Since the 1980s he has written a dozen non-fiction books, publishing many of them very successfully under his own imprint, The Whitcombe Press. A Way with Words tells the stories behind those volumes, all of which had challenges and rewards as various as their subjects. In candid, accessible style, and through a fascinating range of illustrations, Maclean describes the stages of book creation, from the first germ of an idea to writing, design, printing and distribution. He shows, too, that making books is as much hard work and determination as inspiration, with luck always playing its part. And there are reflections on what has happened to books and publishing over four decades of rapid change - the impact of colour printing, the advent of computers and the more recent effects of the digital age. A Way with Words is a celebration of a very New Zealand approach to writing and publishing. It will be of compelling interest and lasting delight to all those for whom books explain, entertain and provide meaning in a transient world"--Front flap.

Title  Cry the wounded land : conversations with God about Māori, Pākehā and the land / Mark Holloway.

Author  Holloway, Mark, 1957- author.

ISBN  047339815X
9780473398156 (paperback)

Physical Details  303 pages ; 23 cm

Summary  "Mark Holloway doesn't want to talk about the bloody history of New Zealand - but he discovers that God does. When he least expects it, God startles Mark, author of best seller The freedom diaries, with a back and forth conversation about Māori (Indigenous), Pākehā (European) and the land (New Zealand). The conversation is astonishing in its clarity, and incredibly moving - yet at the same time, uncomfortable, scary. It doesn't make easy reading. God gently explains how we got into the mess of racial tension we're in, that neither is without guilt. He unfolds the reason he brought Māori and Pākehā to New Zealand - a reason that would ultimately change the entire world. Well known authors, Māori and Pākehā, say that the 19 conversations with God in this book, are what we desperately need to hear to achieve peace in New Zealand. Best selling international authors say Cry the Wounded Land is urgent reading for people of every nation. This is not a book about repentance. In these 19 mind-blowing conversations with God, you'll hear God explain why we need to get together, Māori and Pākehā, in a marriage of cultures, so we can achieve what he brought us to New Zealand to do. He says the land cries out under the burden of blood we have all spilled on it, that it aches and groans for the day we begin to do what we were brought to these beautiful shores to do. Together"--Back cover.

Author  Ness, Michele, 1950- author.
Physical Details  23 pages : colour illustrations ; 23 cm
Summary  "What would St. Dominic, born 800 years ago and the founder of the Dominican Order, think if he visited New Zealand today? In this story actual examples of everyday New Zealanders following the Dominican way of life are shared. ...Meet Sisters Margaret and Roxanne who provide practical help for refugees, Jenny and Mike who support young Mums, Sr. Judith who works at Challenge 2000 helping young people find a job, friends of the Dominicans who plant gardens and give away vegetables to needy people and Sophia who went on hikoi to Parliament to protest about poverty. The final page ends with a child friendly prayer to St. Dominic asking for his help to be wise, loving, kind and to care for our earth "" just as he did! Proceeds from the sale of this book are used to further Dominican projects in Aotearoa, Australia and the Pacific""--Publisher's website.

Summary Guinness is a name instantly recognised the world over – the famous stout has been brewed at St James’s Gate in Dublin for over 250 years, and is now brewed under contract in fifty countries and 9 million glasses of Guinness are drunk each day worldwide. Guinness family members, originally in three major groupings – brewing, banking, and the church – have achieved fame in all walks of life, with some scaling great heights, others tasting great sadness. Guinness Down Under is the never-before-told story of how the famous brew and the family came to New Zealand and Australia in the mid-1800s – the brew itself through export and eventually in-country brewing, and the family through four grandsons of Arthur Guinness who made a new life Down Under, where many of their descendants remain. In this indepth and fascinating account we learn about the origins of Guinness stout, the nature of the export trade, and the vagaries of the market. We learn of the challenges, highlights, and sadness in the complex lives of the four cousins who, independently and at different times, sought to make a better life for themselves Down Under. The entrepreneur, public figure, and political activist; the successful Canterbury pastoralist; the “black sheep” of the family who set up as a Guinness brewer in Melbourne then disappeared forever; the clergyman who took his family to a vicarage in Melbourne, just when the new city was flourishing. Also described is the progress of the iconic Guinness stout in Australia and New Zealand, from early imports in the mid-1800s through to present-day production in Adelaide and Auckland.

Summary: "Karpal Singh, 73, is widely regarded as the best criminal and constitutional lawyer practising in Malaysia today. Since graduating from the University of Singapore in 1969 he has been a fearless, intelligent advocate for justice and a defender of human rights in South East Asia, and has appeared in the Privy Council in London on a number of occasions before such appeals were abandoned by Malaysia. In his long and illustrious career, Karpal Singh has defended more people headed for death row in Malaysian jails than he cares to remember. More importantly he has developed an international reputation for his defence of many people from many nations who have faced the death penalty under Malaysia's Dangerous Drugs Act. One of his biggest achievements in recent years has been his successful defence of former Deputy Prime Minister Anwar Ibrahim on two charges of sodomy. Indeed, without his steely involvement at the head of Anwar's defence it is difficult to imagine the opposition coalition being in the position it is today of being able to realistically challenge the ruling United Malay National Organisation for power at the May 5, 2013 election.<br. In this book, veteran journalist Tim Donoghue, who first met Karpal Singh in 1986 while based in Hong Kong, tells the remarkable story of a tenacious and principled lawyer and politician who has emerged as the kingmaker among the various Malaysian opposition political parties."—Publisher description.

Summary  "In Maea te Toi Ora: Māori Health Transformations Māori clinicians and researchers explore the relationship between Māori culture and Māori mental health. The six contributing authors in the collection are Simon Bennett, Mason Durie, Hinemoa Elder, Te Kani Kingi, Mark Lawrence and Rees Tapsell and are all well known in the mental health field. Each discusses aspects of Māori and indigenous health and the importance of culture to diagnosis, patient history, understanding causes, treatment and assessment of outcomes. Along with a discussion of current research into and knowledge about health and culture, the authors provide case studies from their own experiences of working with Māori to restore well-being"--Publisher information.

Title The Whakatōhea mandate inquiry report.
Author New Zealand. Waitangi Tribunal, author
ISBN 9781869563295 paperback
Projected Publication Date 1805
Physical Details pages cm
Summary "WAI 2662. The claimants were several Whakatōhea groups, and they objected to the Crown's recognition of the Whakatōhea Pre-Settlement Claims Trust's deed of mandate. That mandate was for the negotiation of Whakatōhea's historical Treaty of Waitangi claims. The central complaint was that the Crown had breached the principles of the Treaty by failing to actively protect the claimants' ability to exercise their rangatiratanga and decide for themselves how they would settle their historical claims. The report looks at whether the Crown's decision to recognise the claims trust's deed of mandate was fair and reasonable and made in good faith. The Tribunal found that the Crown had failed to act reasonably, honourably, and in good faith and had thus breached the Treaty principles of partnership and active protection"--Publisher information.

Summary  Over the last thirty years, political correctness has infiltrated every aspect of our lives. It is not just annoying - it has undermined economic growth and the welfare of many New Zealanders. The process has been so gradual and consistent that many New Zealanders have not noticed how previously unpopular views have become institutionalised. Ideology and mythology now shape government action. In the process, we have lost the ability to question and debate. Genuine tolerance has been lost. This book examines political correctness in a number of guises, from the arts, paternalism, diversity, immigration, to Pacific and Maori poverty.

Summary
"Barbara Unkovic has always been drawn to the land of her father, the sun-soaked Croatian island of Korčula in the Adriatic Sea. She spent several years living there, in the seaside village of Racisce, immersed in its way of life, its culture, history and food. Now, inspired by the island's culinary traditions and its abundance of fresh, seasonal ingredients, Barbara has produced The Adriatic Kitchen, a rustic kitchen cookbook full of irresistible recipes and evocative memories. Over 70 delicious recipes are included such as Adriatic almond biscuits, glazed figs, peanut bread, and roast chicken with pomegranate and spinach"--Back cover.

Physical Details  200 pages : colour illustrations ; 28 cm
Summary  "Food tells a story. A story about where it originated, who produced it, the producer's values and its journey from source to plate. We all share in the experience of food; it connects a diversity of people, places and ideas. In this book chefs, writers, academics and producers come together to cook up essays, profiles and recipes that explore Aotearoa's contemporary food culture and an emerging, evolving New Zealand food identity. From mahinga kai and vegetable self-sufficiency to whole-animal sensibility, Kai and Culture is a catalyst for the discussion around the impact food has on our culture. It explores many of the current issues that are involved in the growing, making and eating of food. A cultural cook book, if you will"--Publisher information.

| Summary     | "You may know how to play the chess openings. But where did their names all come from? Have you ever wondered why the “Sicilian Defense” is associated with a Mediterranean island? Ever speculated who the “Evans Gambit” is named after? And what does the “Grand Prix Attack” even mean? Players everywhere know the names of the chess openings, but far fewer know the incredible back stories behind them. This book presents a captivating romp through the history, characters, and places that have indelibly become associated with the first few moves. Featuring the origins of all the main chess openings, including the Philidor Defense, the Morphy Defense, the Steinitz Variation, Alekhine’s Defense, the Fischer Defense, the English Opening, the Danish Gambit, the Vienna Game, the Budapest Gambit, the Giuoco Piano, the Orangutan Opening the Benoni Defense, and dozens more”--Back cover. |

Physical Details: 176 pages : illustrations ; 24 cm
Summary: "The Bulford Kiwi was created in 1919 by New Zealand troops waiting to go home at the end of World War One. Originally carved as a chore to occupy the hours of waiting for a ship back to New Zealand, it became an emblem to be proud of and a cherished link to home. For many of those involved in its construction, and later its resurrection, the Bulford Kiwi came to represent all those servicemen who had passed through Sling Camp, especially those who would never go home."--Back cover.

Series  Modern war studies.
Summary  "Adolf Hitler had high hopes for his conquest of Norway, a country that had great symbolic and strategic value for the Fuhrer. Despite early successes, however, his ambitious northern campaign foundered and ultimately failed. Adam Claasen for the first time reveals the full story of this neglected episode and shows how it helped doom the Third Reich to defeat." "Claasen's study covers every aspect of this ill-fated campaign from the 1940 invasion until war's end and shows how it was eventually relegated to a backwater status as Germany fought to survive in an increasingly unwinnable war. His compelling account sharpens our picture of the German air force and widens our understanding of the Third Reich's way of war."--Jacket.

Summary:  "In this final volume of her memoir, all thoughts of Holy Orders, nursing and office work have been abandoned. Jean Hendy-Harris tells of her life in London in the 1960s, of becoming a show girl, of meeting Stephen Ward and the Kray Twins and of working in a Deviation Brothel just a stone's throw from Harrod's Department Store. She also meets Vidar L'Estrange, the man destined to have the greatest power and influence over her life, and enters into a perilous love affair, the effects of which she finds difficult to overcome. However, a fortune-teller's predictions turn out to be uncannily correct and eventually Jean becomes an ordinary housewife and mother of three, living in New Zealand"--Back cover.

Very popular: January to December 1917 -- Our amazons have saved us: January to 10 November 1918 -- As if she had just recovered consciousness: 11 November to December 1918 -- Doing the best we could - and not for ourselves: 1919 and beyond.
Summary  "New Zealand vaunts itself as first in the world to give women the vote but denies their active role in World War One. Doctors, dentists and ambulance drivers. Munitions workers and mathematicians. Members of the British women's services and managers of hospitals and convalescent homes. Many worked for free, and some paid for amenities whose provision is attributed to men's groups or the government. Echoing our national anthem, let's make their praises heard - after a century of suppression. Summary  "John and Sarah MITCHELL left their farm in Kirkcubrightsire, Scotland and, taking their two children, immigrated to New Zealand in 1868. They bought land in Mimihau in Southland adjacent Sarah’s brother James MABEN and raised eight more children. By 1878 they shifted to Ryal Bush, where John died aged 46 leaving Sarah with 10 children and a farm to run. Sarah shifted her family to Mokoreta and was supported by her brother James. However, Sarah lent James money that was lost in farming speculations. Sarah met Simon CHISHOLM and a son resulted. When John’s mother died in Scotland, the inheritance went to Sarah and she was able to shift back to Mimihau. Sarah died in Invercargill in 1918. All seven of the MITCHELL daughters married and had children. Only one of the three sons married, another lived to be 82 and the third died unmarried at age 26. Three grandsons died in World War 1. Sarah and John MITCHELL had 43 grandchildren"--Publisher information.

Physical Details xii, 341 pages : illustrations ; 25 cm
Summary "This is a vivid portrayal of how World War Two affected two young people, and their experiences of those traumatic years as they remained thousands of kilometres apart: Jim Insull, a navigator in RAF Bomber Command, eventually acing violent death on more or less a daily basis; and his wife Gwen, coping alone back in New Zealand with a baby and young child. Jim's story is told in his own words, from entries in his war diaries. Gwen's story was created by Robin, from family notes and research, to provide a contrasting picture of their lives. Sadly, Robin was killed in a car crash not long ago, leaving their other daughter Sue [Cunninghame] to complete the project"--Back cover.

Physical Details 212 pages : illustrations ; 21 cm
Summary "The experiences of life in the 1940s through to the 1970s had a profound effect on those who lived through these times. Finding an identity in a world still 'shell-shocked' with the residue of global conflict and the enormity of the after-effects of the war was a daunting challenge. Although the effects filtered through all sectors of the community, often with negative repercussions, it became an accepted way of life. The damage these times had on the lives of baby boomers, and the trials and tribulations that touched innocent victims, can never be under-estimated; and like all times of conflict it exposes the folly of war. The most rewarding experience in undertaking this endeavour was bringing back to life the rich personalities of some of the characters the author knew and loved in and through these post-war years. While this is a work of fiction, the characters were developed from the personalities of real people and their real life experiences. The author has tried to bring some understanding of these turbulent years of childhood and youth while growing up in a world not experienced by today's generation, and perhaps now a distant memory to some who lived in it"--Back cover.

Series: My New Zealand story.

Summary: "You're having an amazing family holiday, one where everyone is there and all eighteen of you are squeezed into one house. Fast forward to 4 o'clock in the morning, and there’s banging and yelling and screaming. The police are in the house, pulling people out of bed … Like many 13-year-old girls, Sofia's main worries are how she can earn enough pocket money to buy the groovy go-go boots that are all the rage, and if she will die of embarrassment giving a speech she has to do for school! It comes as a surprise to Sofia and her family when her big brother, Lenny, talks about protests, overstayers and injustices against Pacific Islanders. Through her spirited and heartfelt diary entries, we join Sofia as she navigates life in the 1970s and is inspired by the courageous and tireless work of the Polynesian Panthers as they encourage immigrant families across New Zealand to stand up for their rights"--Publisher information.

Summary: "In January 1873, New Zealand, in a sparsely populated coastal community on Wellington's south coast, the peaceful lives of Owhiro Bay residents are shattered with the discovery of two brutal and senseless murders. What begins as a local murder investigation turns into a plot of global proportions. From the political agenda of England's Prime Minister, the Machiavellian son of Russia’s Tsar, to the famed exploits of America’s Confederate ship Alabama. Intricately researched, this story uses many recorded historical events and people to weave a story of intrigue, conspiracy and greed. Returning in ‘For Want of a Shilling’, veteran soldier and local constable, Sergeant Moana Rangitira of the Armed Constabulary, investigates the murders, which leads him in frantic pursuit of Russians through the streets of Wellington. The trail leads northwards where he encounters smugglers, and his violent past as a Forest Ranger remerges to haunt him when he is pursued by a Maori war party, intent on revenge, through Taranaki’s rugged bush and wilderness. Eventually confronting the Russians in the dark waters of Auckland’s Waitemata Harbour, he discovers they want more than information. Can Sergeant Rangitira prevent the Russians from fulfilling their ultimate goal, and can he prevent Russia and England from going to war?" -- Back cover.

Summary "The Countess's Groom: Rose, the Countess Malmstoke, is trapped in a violent marriage. Escape seems impossible, until her horse groom, Will Fenmore, offers to help her. As they plan her escape to the American colonies, Rose learns to trust Will with her life and her heart. Is the future she dreams of possible? The Spinster’s Secret: Matilda Chapple is penniless, orphaned, and dependent on her uncle's grim charity, but she's finally found a way to escape: she'll write her way to financial freedom. When Mattie pens a series of titillating short stories, she starts earning money ... and notoriety. Her secret is safe, until battle-scarred Waterloo veteran, Edward Kane, agrees to uncover the anonymous author's identity. Can Mattie conceal the secret of her scandalous writings, or will Edward discover that the virginal spinster and the risqué authoress are one and the same person? The Baronet's Bride: Sir Gareth Locke lost an arm at Waterloo. He's in love with his new bride, but he's dreading their wedding night. He knows it will be an ordeal: clumsy, awkward, and mortifying. Cecily Locke has been married once before. She knows what to expect in the marriage bed. It will be uncomfortable and a little messy, but over quickly enough. But Gareth and Cecily are about to have a wedding night that neither of them expects"--Back cover.

Summary  "The good folk of small town Fulton are dying in a horror of bleeding and hallucination. It is up to the town's redoubtable Chief of Police, Marion Quirke, and it's only doctor, Shona Price, to find the truth. But soon the two women are mired in a world of conspiracy and deception as the media; politicians and big business all manipulate the fate of Fulton for their own ends. As the disease spreads it carries lies, fear and chaos with it. Marion, Shona and their small band of allies must decide just how much they will risk in their fight to get the truth before the public. First though, they must uncover exactly what that truth is. What on earth is this terrible disease, and where did it come from? Is it an accident of nature or a deliberate attack? An isolated incident or deeply connected to mysterious events in China, Australia and Iraq? What is the real interest of Homeland Security in all this and is it just coincidence that the Presidential election is only weeks away? Only one thing is certain – deadly spores are in the air. It's time for you to be afraid and do what you're told. Don't ask questions, don't leave the house, don't even breathe…The good folk of small town Fulton are dying in a horror of Summary "This is the story of New Zealand Maori who lost their whenua. It is the story of poor Irish migrants who lost their land in Ireland and came looking for its replacement. It is the story of a young country’s beginnings and the theme that dominated and defined the history of its people from the Bay of Islands to Parihaka: that ancient, destructive struggle for land" -- Back cover.

Title  The expatriate myth : New Zealand writers and the colonial world / Helen Bones.

Author  Bones, Helen, author.

ISBN  1988531179 paperback
       9781988531175 paperback

Physical Details  248 pages ; 23 cm

Contents  Introduction: A lost generation -- Literary culture in New Zealand -- Making the Waitematā smoke -- The Tasman writing world -- From a garden in the Antipodes : the colonial writing world -- Future or exile? : reactions to 'overseas' writing and writers -- New Zealand writers and the modern world -- "The whole thing's been a farce" : New Zealand writers in London and overseas -- Setting the Thames on fire -- Concluding thoughts.

Summary  "Many New Zealand writers in the late nineteenth and early twentieth century travelled extensively or lived overseas for a time, and they often led very interesting lives. The received wisdom is that they were forced to leave these colonial backblocks in search of literary inspiration and publishing opportunities. In The Expatriate Myth, Helen Bones presents a challenge to this conventional understanding, based on detailed historical and empirical research. Was it actually necessary for them to leave to find success? How prevalent was expatriatism among New Zealand writers? Did their experiences fit the usual tropes about expatriatism and exile? Were they fleeing an oppressive society lacking in literary opportunity?

In the field of literary studies, scholars are often consumed with questions about ‘national’ literature and ‘what it means to be a New Zealander’. And yet many of New Zealand’s writers living overseas operated in a transnational way, taking advantage of colonial networks in a way that belies any notion of a single national allegiance. Most who left New Zealand, even if they were away for a time, continued to write about and interact with their homeland, and in many cases came back. In this fascinating and clear-sighted book, Helen Bones offers a fresh perspective on some hoary New Zealand literary chestnuts"--Back cover.

Summary "These three novellas are separate stories that subtly interconnect at various points. The Philosopher is a tale which begins with the sacking of a popular academic and tracks the lives of people caught up in the backwash. The Physicist follows the troubles and distresses of various characters involved in the discovery of cosmic sounds set off by the cataclysmic collision of two black holes a billion years ago, confirming Einstein's theory of gravitational waves. The third novella, The Poet, sees the main protagonist attempting to stop a church from demolishing one of its old and beautiful heritage buildings. All three stories are informed separately by a classic piece of literature; the first by The Waste Land, the second by the medieval drama Everyman, and the third by Waiting For Godot"--Front jacket flap.

Summary "The Hamiltons look forward to their annual Christmas holiday on the New Zealand coast. Jack and Naomi, their five children and their guests are settling in to the chaotic family atmosphere at the sprawling home known as Carnival's Hide when the world is thrown out of order by the unexpected arrival of three visitors. Charming, enigmatic and sinister, the three brothers have come to stay. Only 17-year-old Harry questions their strange ways, but even she isn't sure what is real anymore: are they really related to Teddy Carnival, said to have drowned on that beach many years ago, or are they tricksters - conjured by her overactive imagination? This will be a Christmas to be remembered, where long-buried secrets will be revealed and no one will ever be quite the same."--Publisher information.

Summary "On a dry summer's day in 1977 Rose Churchill, full of shyness and romantic dreams, waits under Rata River Bridge for a young man whose life will be forever altered. Jessa Reynolds is bound by a cosmic thread to a man she has never met, and drawn to the life of the aunt her family has kept from her. The aunt they never speak of. When the paths of William Cook and Jessa finally cross, he is a well-respected architect in his thirties, she a student of seventeen about to embark on her university studies. His familiarity is beyond her understanding and his conservative and unyielding persona frightens her. Jessa's haunting angelic beauty fascinates William. He knows he should stay away, but he can't resist tiptoeing into her world. It takes Jessa five years before she fully understands the mysteries of the past surrounding William and her aunt Rose—mysteries that may tear her family apart. Will William step over the line drawn for him by Jessa's grandfather the year she turned eighteen? Title The way of the poet : selected poems / Ted Rutter.

9780980318418 (pbk.)
Physical Details viii, 109 pages : illustrations ; 21 cm.
Summary "The poems in Ted Rutter's The Way of the Poet are divided into three sections: The Second Person – the addressee, The First Person – the speaker and The Third Person – the third party. In this collection Rutter employs a vast range of (mostly natural) motifs and symbols to articulate his ideas; from the most obviously traditional: stars, wind, water, trees, and gardens, to the more unexpected: the poem itself, religion, words, and a viaduct. Rutter's poetry is a melding of natural, scientific and Maori terminology. In his philosophy, everything on earth has a use both in its lifetime and afterwards; for example, as he puts it in an early poem, "Ponder the experience / Tell only those you deem / to be sympathetic / to The Rapture" ("Phenomena"). For Rutter, the more distinct all of these entities – earth, humanity, elation in this case – become the easier it is to lose sight of the fact that everything serves a purpose. Additionally, his philosophy of constant change, movement and flux sets up a creative tension between the usual assumption of the completed poem as being a finished, closed artifact, and Rutter's approach to his surroundings and his writing. He responds to the world as an endless process, and sees no reason why literature should be approached differently. This belief in the centrality of movement and change may explain his productivity, as he continually returns to particular themes and preoccupations."--Stylus Poetry Journal.

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/24.

Summary "Developed countries, including New Zealand, used to consider their populations wholly literate, in the sense that almost all adults could read and write. Contemporary definitions expand the concept of literacy to include wider cognitive skills, and extend it across the whole population: people are more or less literate depending on how well they understand and use printed information to solve everyday problems at home and at work. Using this wider definition, the International Adult Literacy Survey found that developed countries contain a considerable number of people who have poor literacy skills. This paper looks at whether an increase in the basic literacy skills of adults would have a positive effect on the New Zealand economy. It finds good evidence for the benefits of literacy: studies consistently find that adults with better literacy skills are more likely to be employed, and to earn more, than those with poorer literacy skills, even when taking account of other factors which affect work performance. There is little rigorous evidence, however, for the benefits of adult literacy training and almost no accompanying information on the costs of this training. While there is a good case for an increased focus on adult literacy, and on workplace literacy in particular, these findings suggest a cautious approach to expanding publicly-funded adult literacy programmes. There is a clear need for more and better New Zealand-based research, for piloting innovative literacy programmes and for undertaking rigorous evaluations. A modest increase in literacy training may not materially affect economic performance but it may still be a worthwhile investment – only good-quality research and evaluation will tell us this."--Publisher's website.

Title: Affordability of housing : concepts, measurement and evidence / Mark Robinson, Grant M. Scobie and Brian Hallinan.
Author: Robinson, Mark, 1961- author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 06/03.
Summary: "There has recently been widespread public debate and media attention around housing affordability. This paper discusses the concept of affordability as it applies to housing, examines the approaches used to measure affordability, and then documents the aggregate evidence for New Zealand over the last twenty years. We largely use the Household Economic Survey conducted by Statistics New Zealand to obtain our data. We conclude that affordability is difficult to define and that there is no consensus as to the best way to measure it. Using a range of measures, we examine the trends over time. Our data reveals no long-term trend in affordability when considering all measures. Different measures show different movements over time. Affordability has appeared to move in cycles over the last twenty years."--Publisher's website.

Summary "When Alexander returns home to the family farm, he is surprised to find a note from his mother, Flash. In it, she says she must be away for the night, fixing a pump in one of the family’s far-flung orchards. She asks Alexander to find a knife she left in the apple grove. This isn’t just any knife—Alexander’s great-grandfather from Scotland brought it to New Zealand during the gold rush. Family stories tell how his friend and companion, a local Māori, carved the knife’s mysterious handle more than a century ago. Alexander knows the knife is a precious heirloom. Alexander’s sister, Sophie, and his friends Trevor and Jo join in the search, but the knife is nowhere to be found. Trevor suspects the knife fell into the caves that run under the orchard, and Alexander, the eldest, mounts an expedition to retrieve it. While the others stay behind, Alexander and Jo enter the caves—but what they find there will change their lives forever. Alexander will have to face his worst fears and learn the true meaning of courage. At the same time, his waiting friends must contend with dangerous gangsters in the apple orchard. When these men kidnap Gemma, a neighbourhood girl, can the kids band together to rescue her and help their friends escape the underground labyrinth?"--www.amazon.com

Title: Allocating vote : health - 'needs assessment' and an economics-based approach / Nancy Devlin and Paul Hansen (contract to Treasury) (Department of Preventive and Social Medicine & Department of Economics) (Department of Economics, University of Otago).
Author: Devlin, N. J. (Nancy J.), author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 00/4.
Summary: "This paper critiques 'needs assessment' as a basis for allocating public funding of health and disability services and discusses an alternative economics-based approach. In essence, the former approach ignores the effects on health outcomes of health care spending at the margin while the latter focuses explicitly on these considerations. A simple diagrammatic model is introduced that illustrates at a conceptual level the (micro)economic constraints and choices available to policy-makers. Finally, some practical steps and unresolved issues in implementing the economics approach are considered."--Publisher's website.

Title Asymmetric information, financial intermediation and the monetary transmission mechanism : a critical review / Iris Claus and Arthur Grimes.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/19.
Summary "Macroeconomic models currently used by policy makers generally assume that the workings of financial markets can be fully summarised by financial prices, because the Modigliani and Miller (1958) theorem holds. This paper argues that these models are too limited in describing how monetary policy (and other) shocks are transmitted to the economy and points to new directions. The models are too limited because they disregard an information asymmetry between borrowers and lenders and the importance of financial intermediaries not only for individual depositors but the economy as a whole. Incorporating financial market interactions into macroeconomic models will enhance the understanding of the transmission mechanisms of monetary policy and other shocks."

Title Automatic fiscal stabilisers : implications for New Zealand / Julie Tam (Department of Economics, Stanford University) and Heather Kirkham (The Treasury).

Author Tam, Julie, author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/10.

Summary "Automatic fiscal stabilisers, or the cyclical components of the budget balance, are larger in New Zealand than in the average OECD country, reflecting both higher sensitivity to the economic cycle, and a more volatile cycle. Fiscal vigilance is especially important in New Zealand. Large projected operating surpluses could easily disappear if lower economic outcomes are mistakenly assumed to be cyclical. But, automatic stabilisers are difficult to use in a policy framework as empirical estimates of the cyclical budget balance vary significantly. While the estimated trend in automatic stabilisers is broadly similar, the level varies significantly, such that at any point in time a 'structural surplus' may be dependant on the estimation method."--Publisher's website.

Summary: "Migration is at historically high levels and more than a quarter of the New Zealand population was born overseas. Yet immigration remains a deeply contentious issue, with the debate more often shaped by emotion than evidence. Julie Fry and Peter Wilson have developed a new framework that broadens the scope of how we consider migration policy. Rather than just considering the effect of migration on GDP, they look at factors such as the Treaty of Waitangi. Their goal? Migration policy that acknowledges the complexity of the world we all inhabit"--Publisher information.

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/22.

Summary: "This paper explores the "brain drain" hypothesis - the idea that New Zealand is losing many of its most talented citizens to other countries. We conclude that we are experiencing more of a brain exchange than a brain drain. There have been net outflows of New Zealand citizens for forty years, and we have been replacing those leaving with non-New Zealand citizens."--Publisher's website.

Title  Budget management that counts : recent approaches to budget and fiscal management in New Zealand / Angela Barnes and Steve Leith.
Author  Barnes, Angela, author.
Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/24.
Summary  "Budget management in New Zealand altered substantially with the implementation of the Public Finance Act 1989 and the Fiscal Responsibility Act 1994. The paper sets out the evolution of fiscal and budget management over the last ten years, in response to the fiscal policy and financial management framework. It focuses on the top-down management of spending aggregates and how this has evolved into the “fiscal provisions” framework. The paper concludes with an illustration of the challenges facing the provisions framework. Work is currently underway to consider the challenges that have arisen through its operation over the last five years. This paper is a companion paper to Treasury Working Paper 01/25 New Zealand’s Fiscal Policy Framework: Experience and Evolution by John Janssen."--Publisher's website.

Title: Calm after the storm? supply-side contributions to New Zealand’s GDP volatility decline / Robert A Buckle, David Haugh and Peter Thomson.

Author: Buckle, Robert, author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/33.

Summary: "The variance of New Zealand’s real GDP has declined since the mid-1980s. To investigate why, this paper decomposes the variance of chain-weighted estimates of production-based real GDP growth into sector shares, sector growth rate variances and co-variances. The principal explanation for the decline in GDP volatility is a fall in the sum of sector variances driven by a decline in the Services and Manufacturing sector production growth variances. Sector co-variances have had a dominant influence on the profile of GDP volatility and this influence has not diminished. Despite marked changes in sector shares, notably increases in Services and Primary sector shares and a decrease in the share of Manufacturing, this has not been a significant factor influencing the decline in GDP volatility. We postulate that policy interventions such as "Think Big", regulatory interventions during the early 1980s, and the introduction of GST are key explanations for the higher volatility until the mid 1980s. Cessation of these interventions, deregulation and possibly changes in inventory management methods are important reasons why GDP volatility has fallen since then."--Publisher's website.

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/07.
Summary "Many policy models require assumptions about future population trends. Sensitivity tests for these assumptions are normally carried out by comparing population projection variants. This paper outlines some of the conditions that variant-based sensitivity tests must meet if they are to be informative. It then describes four common situations where these conditions are not met, so that conventional sensitivity tests are not informative. The solution, the paper argues, is stochastic population projections."--Publisher's website.

Title  Capital shallowness : a problem for New Zealand? / Julia Hall and Grant Scobie.
Author  Hall, Julia author.
Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 05/05.
Summary  "There is now substantial evidence that New Zealand's overall rate of economic growth relative to Australia's has been lower in part because of lower levels and slower growth in our labour productivity. This then requires us to explore why the labour productivity is lower in New Zealand. This paper explores the extent to which a lower level of capital per hour worked (or lower capital intensity) is associated with less output per hour worked in New Zealand. We find that the capital intensity in New Zealand has not been increasing as fast as in Australia for nearly 25 years. Between 1995 and 2002, lower capital intensity explains 70 percent of the difference in output per hour worked. Whereas the cost of labour relative to capital has been rising in Australia, it has fallen by 20 percent in New Zealand between 1987 and 2002. The relative price of labour to capital in New Zealand fell to 60 percent of the Australian value in 2002 after being comparable in the late 1980's. It is to be expected that New Zealand enterprises would therefore tend to adopt less capital intensive production methods. Differences in capital intensity could also have arisen because the underlying production technologies are different even if the relative prices of labour and capital in the two economies had been similar. We explore this issue and find a similar response of capital intensity to changes in the wage rate relative to the return on capital for the economies as a whole. However when we exclude the mining sector we find that the responsiveness in New Zealand is about one half that of Australia. Whether there are impediments or greater uncertainty in New Zealand that limit the ability of firms to respond to economic signals as much as their Australian counterparts remain as possible explanations requiring further investigation."—Publisher's website.

Title Carbon dioxide emissions reductions in New Zealand : a minimum disruption approach / John Creedy and Catherine Sleeman.

Author Creedy, John, 1949- author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/25.

Summary "Reductions in carbon dioxide emissions can come from (among other things) changes to the structure of final demands, changes in the use of fossil fuels by industry, and changes to the structure of inter-industry transactions. This paper examines the nature of the least disruptive changes, that is the minimum changes to these three components which are consistent with specified overall reductions in carbon dioxide in New Zealand. In examining the minimum changes needed, constraints are imposed on the corresponding changes in GDP growth and aggregate employment."--Publisher's website.

Summary "This paper examines the effects on consumer prices of a range of carbon taxes in New Zealand, using information about inter-industry transactions and the use of fossil fuels by industries. The resulting effects on the welfare of different household types and total expenditure levels are examined. The excess burdens of the carbon tax are computed for the different household types. Finally, overall measures of inequality are reported."--Publisher's website.

Changes in New Zealand's production structure : an input output analysis / Iris Claus.

Author: Claus, Iris, author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/01.

Summary: "This paper investigates changes in the production structure of the New Zealand economy using input output data. The analysis is undertaken at the 25-industry level using inter industry transactions for 1971-72, 1977-78, 1981-82, 1986-87, 1990-91 and 1994-95. Changes in the composition of gross output and value added are examined. Backward and forward linkages, indices of industry interconnectedness, a value added production multiplier, a cumulated primary input coefficient for compensation of employees and a measure of import content of final demand output are calculated, taking into account both direct and indirect transactions. The results suggest that some industries have been subject to large structural change and that a shift in New Zealand's pattern of industrial activity has occurred. These changes will have affected the transmission and propagation of shocks in the economy."--Publisher's website.

Summary
"This resource is for migrants who have professional qualifications and experience gained overseas and whose language background is not English. The resource could also be useful for teachers and trainers who work in the area, and for employers of migrants. In this resource, the focus is on the challenging aspects of job interviews, rather than providing a step-by-step sequence of the whole interview process. In some parts, suggested answers to interview questions are provided as examples, but it is important to keep in mind that interviewers look for an applicant who can provide answers in their own words, rather than present memorised answers"--Introduction, Page 1.

Title: Competition policy in small distant open economies: some lessons from the economics literature / Lewis Evans and Patrick Hughes.
Author: Evans, Lewis T., author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource: colour illustrations
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 03/31.
Summary: "New Zealand is a small open economy that is remote from all major markets. The smallness and remoteness of New Zealand combine to imply that this country has, at least quantitatively, distinctive features for the regulation of economic activity by competition law. The isolation and small size of the economy mean that typically all but exporting firms are small as judged on a world scale, and that domestic markets are small and generally highly concentrated. This paper reviews the economic literature on the implications of an economy’s size and isolation for competition law."--Publisher's website.

Conserving biodiversity institutions, policies and incentives: final report / Carl Binning (CSIRO Wildlife and Ecology) sponsored by the New Zealand Treasury with co-funding from the Ministry for the Environment and Department of Conservation.

1 online resource

Summary
"Biological diversity, a term that encapsulates all of life - the diversity of plants and animals and the places they live, has changed the way we think about nature conservation. The conservation of biodiversity demands that we understand the role of natural systems and ecological processes in sustaining landscapes. Landscapes and the issues embedded within them vary enormously from the protection of remote wilderness areas to maintaining the productivity of agricultural regions and the quality of life within cities."--Publisher's website.

Summary: "This paper considers evidence on whether deregulation of single-buyer Producer Boards is likely to yield net benefits to producers, relevant industries and the New Zealand economy. It assumes some familiarity with industry structures and the ongoing debate. The discussion focuses on the static and dynamic effects of the statutory single buyer powers of the Dairy, Apple & Pear and Kiwifruit Boards, and concludes that on balance, the benefits of deregulation are expected to significantly outweigh the risks posed."--Publisher's website.

Title Crown financial asset management : objectives and practice / Arthur Grimes.
Author Grimes, A., author.
Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/12.
Summary "This paper analyses key issues that may be relevant to setting the Crown's overall objectives and practices for financial asset and liability management. It examines implications of the nature of the Crown's balance sheet for asset and liability management and investigates the appropriate approach of the Crown towards managing risk (concluding that a risk averse approach is warranted). The issue of centralisation versus decentralisation of Crown asset and liability management is analysed both from a portfolio management perspective and from an organisational design perspective. Insights from private sector financial conglomerates are also incorporated. The paper concludes that individual Crown financial entities should each continue to be responsible for setting their own strategic asset allocation, after taking into account the nature of their liabilities. A central Crown body should, however, monitor and aggregate information from each of these entities and be delegated the responsibility and power to manage risks to the overall Crown balance sheet."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "Bernadette had tried for forty years to forget the wrongs done to her younger more naive self but when a chance encounter with the past emerges via the internet, the temptation for revenge becomes too great to resist. In the late 1960s the man Bernadette was obsessively in love with makes the suggestion that she murder their baby son when his abortion attempts fail to get rid of the child. Decades later impersonating Persephone Faith Callahan allows her to enter into email dialogue with her former lover seeking revenge and weaving an internet web of dishonesty and deceit. As their cyber space relationship develops the boundaries between fairy tale and reality become ever more blurred"--Distributor's website.

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/04.
Summary "New Zealand has, by OECD standards, high birth rates. This has provided New Zealand with a relatively young population and continuing labour force growth. Both these features are, on many accounts, good for economic growth. Yet most discussions of New Zealand's economic performance and its prospects for moving up the OECD income distribution have paid little attention to demography."--Publisher's website.

Summary "This paper presents an analysis of the distribution of socio-economic deprivation throughout New Zealand. The analysis focuses on the three census years 1986, 1991, and 1996. A summary deprivation measure is constructed which approximates NZDep96 using standard regression techniques. The paper extends a static analysis of deprivation by examining changes to the deprivation profile across time on a regional basis. Differences in the incidence of deprivation for different ethnic groups are emphasised. Māori and Pacific people are more likely to live in deprived meshblocks than their European counterparts. We also touch on the role isolation plays in determining the distribution of deprivation."--Publisher's website.

Title Determining the discount rate for Government projects / Louise Young.

Author Young, Louise, author.

Physical Details 1 online resource: illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 02/21.

Summary "Discount rates are widely used in the public sector to assess policy proposals where costs and benefits accrue over long time periods. Socially optimal policy choices require an appropriate choice of discount rate. This paper assesses the applicability of the two key theoretical approaches to selecting discount rates in the public sector. The two key theoretical approaches considered are the social rate of time preference and the social opportunity cost. Estimation issues in determining the rate using these two approaches are reviewed. The social rate of time preference is considered to be the appropriate approach. When estimates of the social rate of time preference are unavailable or clearly unreliable and the Government is considering financing a project, the social opportunity cost should be used. The social opportunity cost can be used as a proxy for the social rate of time preference. The paper presents an example using the capital asset pricing model in a weighted average cost of capital formula to determine a social opportunity cost."--Publisher's website.

Title Discrete hours labour supply modelling: specification, estimation and simulation / John Creedy and Guyonne Kalb.

Author Creedy, John, 1949- author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/20.

Summary "The assumption behind discrete hours labour supply modelling is that utility-maximising individuals choose from a relatively small number of hours levels, rather than being able to vary hours worked continuously. Such models are becoming widely used in view of their substantial advantages, compared with a continuous hours approach, when estimating and their role in tax policy microsimulation. This paper provides an introduction to the basic analytics of discrete hours labour supply modelling. Special attention is given to model specification, maximum likelihood estimation and microsimulation of tax reforms. The analysis is at each stage illustrated by the use of numerical examples."--Publisher's website.

Author Hyslop, Dean Robert, 1962- author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 00/14.

Summary "This paper provides an econometric analysis of the effects of receiving welfare benefits on individuals' future income, using longitudinal administrative data on individual incomes. After controlling for heterogeneous differences in individual incomes, spurious effects of contemporaneous benefit receipt and possible endogeneity with incomes, there is no systematic evidence of a positive or negative effect of benefit receipt on incomes. The results are generally imprecisely estimated and sensitive to the choice of specification. Also, a simple first-order specification with unobserved heterogeneity provides a reasonable characterisation of individual income dynamics, although formal statistical tests tend to reject this specification as being too parsimonious. <tr>
<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;This paper examines the ability of consumer confidence to forecast consumption expenditure in New Zealand. A two-step process commonly used by other researchers, which was developed by Carroll, Fuhrer and Wilcox (1994), was utilised. The two most widely followed and reported measures of consumer confidence in New Zealand – the One News Colmar Brunton Poll and the Westpac McDermott Miller Consumer Confidence Survey – were used. Lagged values of consumer confidence on its own were found to have some predictive ability for forecasting consumption growth. However, this predictive ability was greatly reduced when control variables – labour income, interest rates and stock prices – were introduced, suggesting that consumer confidence merely reflects current economic conditions. Because of this, consumer confidence provides little additional information above readily available economic and financial data for forecasting consumption. However, since confidence indexes are available in a timely manner compared to economic data, they still provide useful summary information for making assessments of current economic conditions.&quot;--Publisher's website.</td>

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;This paper considers Crown financial portfolio composition from a welfare perspective. It argues that a broad definition of the Crown's portfolio is required for analysing the welfare implications of portfolio composition. In practice, this means incorporating the present discounted value of tax and expenditure flows as well as traditional measures of assets and liabilities. Financial portfolio composition affects welfare for a number of reasons: imperfect and incomplete markets; distortionary taxes; externalities; and agency problems. There is unlikely to be a single policy objective for choosing the preferred portfolio composition that integrates all of those factors. However, it is argued that the Crown should be risk averse and aim to eliminate all diversifiable risk in its portfolio. There is a reasonable case for adopting a low-risk Crown portfolio. Importantly, that does not necessarily require a low-volatility financial portfolio.&quot;--Publisher's website.</td>

Summary "Recent research shows that trade of goods and financial products is much greater within countries than it is between countries, even allowing for factors such as transports costs. This lack of economic integration is likely to be costly for small nations, as internal trade is much less diverse than internal trade in large nations. European countries have long argued that the adoption of a single currency is a primary means to enhance economic and social integration, and with the adoption of the euro most European countries have given up monetary independence in order to gain these benefits. This paper examines the modern literature analysing the costs and benefits of forming a monetary union. It contends that New Zealand should reassess the merits of these arguments, although it does not perform a cost benefit analysis for New Zealand, or even recommend whose currency should be preferred. It appears that the benefits of monetary independence are lower than previously thought. This is because most countries have attained low inflation, and because of new evidence that the volatility of exchange rates inherent with monetary independence may be the cause of economic shocks rather than the means of adjusting to economic shocks."--Publisher's website.

Summary "Markets are becoming more integrated. Whilst governments have limited influence over this process, they can hasten or hinder the pace of integration and will need to respond to the implications of integration. This paper provides a framework for thinking about the benefits and costs of market integration. It analyses how cross border flows of goods, services, capital and labour affect the living standards of New Zealanders in terms of both productivity and incomes as well as other, broader, aspects of living standards. Particular attention is paid to the areas of spatial economic analysis and national sovereignty and identity."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "In Raven Araroa’s kingdom, firstborn royal daughters were destined to rule, the Woman Kings of Nadir. A thousand years before she was born, a malevolent regime decreed there would be no more Woman Kings, by ordering firstborn daughters to immediately be put to death. But one of the daughters has survived. Born to the Queen in secret, Raven has been raised in a treevillage far from the royal palace. She is sixteen when her existence is discovered by the King. Pursued by the King’s Hunters, and knowing she’ll be killed if she’s caught, Raven must flee. With two friends, she sets off, bound for the safety of a neighboring island nation. Along the way, she meets a charming stranger who will put her sense of trust to the test"--Provided by publisher.

Knowing being: reality is a function of being / Gerard Zwier PhD.

Summary
"The traditional model of how the universe and life came about has some very serious gaps in it which many scientists of all persuasions tend to ignore. In my view, the idea of a physical reality being created out of nothing is a bizarre notion. Instead, I suggest that in contrast to an understanding of the world in which the evolution of Homo sapiens is almost incidental to "the way things really are", knowledge is always the product of a living entity and its perceived environment. This means that awareness, thinking and knowing things are not just the prerogative of human beings, but of all beings, whether they are micro-organisms or plants, trees, insects, fish or mammals. My conclusion is that all living beings have the ability not only to grow, metabolise nutrients and reproduce, but also to know the appropriate responses to problematic situations. We are all 'knowing beings' within our own reality"--Back cover.

Summary "Hi, my name is Levi. I'm a very active seven year old and one Christmas holiday I got into BIG TROUBLE at home and my parents decided to send me 300 miles away to my grandparents home. I was pretty scared about that because I had never been away from all my family before. My nana was grumpy sometimes too. My grandad was fun but I suppose even he could get grumpy living with a seven year old for three weeks. I look pretty happy on the cover of my book but you need to read inside to find out that my holiday on the Rangaunu Harbour, 300 miles away from my home in New Plymouth New Zealand wasn't all fun"--Print back cover.

Summary "Freya is half blind, poor, and lives in land-locked Medar: an unlikely heroine. So when she finds a mysterious tablet telling her about a beautiful land beyond the Wall free from the evil Master, she doesn't think anybody will believe her. The same day, her family learns they have been selected to live in the Golden City, ruled over by the Master. But instead of entering the City with her family, Freya instead finds herself condemned to death by the Guards. At the last minute Freya is rescued by an invisible Watcher. What follows is an incredible journey, that takes Freya to the very edge of the only world she has ever known. Will she unlock the clues hidden in the tablet? The key to the long-lost path to Tyrelia, and freedom, is in her hands"--Back cover of print version.

"Michael co-founded Code Club Aotearoa and in this interview we talk about the work that organisation is doing with primary aged school children to teach them how to code. We also talk about his background on rural farms in New Zealand and experience living for several years in the Amazonian jungle before he got into his career in IT. We also discuss his involvement in Canterbury Tech - and what it was like to introduce the Prime Minister of New Zealand at a conference"--Publishers website.

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;Dominic and Sebastian are two twelve-year-old boys living on a hilly point of a bush-clad land in Coromandel, New Zealand. The land is abundant with wildlife and fruit orchards. When a strange, circular shape mysteriously appears in a local maize field, Dom and Seb investigate. But something terribly powerful occurs, and the boys vanish into thin air. They find themselves not only on the other side of the planet but also over three thousand years back in time. Egypt, the superpower of the ancient world for ten centuries, is in disarray...&quot;--Back cover.</td>

Summary  "Sam is mayor of the fast growing Selwyn District and is one of the youngest mayors in New Zealand. We talk about his childhood, the decision to pursue a political career and what he has learned on the journey. In particular, he reflects on the people who have played a role in his life and encouraged him and what sort of legacy he wants to leave behind. We also cover his involvement in other things such as 24/7 youth work and engaging with young people in Selwyn"--Publishers website.

Summary: "Mina Cucina can't cook. She juggles, jiggles, dribbles and drops. But when she drops the pasta pot, a new animal is born. Can Spaghetti Giraffe and his quirky friends help Mina Cucina enter the Great Bonbon Confectionation - the biggest baking competition the valley's ever seen? All she needs is a cake. A cake that doesn't erupt, take flight or explode"--Print back cover.

Author  Hanlon, John, 1949- author.
Physical Details  1 online resource
Contents  Stealing smokes -- My favourite place in the world -- A note from Vinny -- The swimming lesson -- A fountain ringed by chubby cherubs -- Irene's promise.
Summary  "In his second collection of short stories John Hanlon sets out to entertain with six short and sometimes twisted tales about growing up (or never growing up). In the title story, two boyhood friends meet up later in life and one of them discovers that if you practice deception there is usually a price to pay. In other stories we find megalomania often comes in small packages, children learn from adults when often the reverse should apply and even the seemingly innocent can harbour guilty secrets. Told with cheeky irreverence in an Antipodean tone of voice, these stories, while pure fiction, will often be so close to your truths they are bound to resonate. And as is always the way with Hanlon’s stories — they'll almost certainly get you in the end"--Back cover.

Summary: "Albert Black, known as the 'jukebox killer', was only twenty when he was convicted of murdering another young man in a fight at a milk bar in Auckland on 26 July 1955. His crime fuelled growing moral panic about teenagers, and he was to hang less than five months later, the second-to-last person to be executed in New Zealand. But what really happened? Was this a love crime, was it a sign of juvenile delinquency? Or was this dark episode in our recent history more about our society's reaction to outsiders"--Publisher information.

Summary "It's been over a year since Tom returned from the ancient land of the Other after waking King Arthur, and he wishes he'd never left, so when Beansprout returns to see if he wants to go back, he leaps at the chance. He is overjoyed to be reunited with his friends, and he joins them in the search for Nimue, a priestess of Avalon who has disappeared. While they investigate Nimue's disappearance they wonder whether she's been taken by force, or is she deliberately hiding? And is her disappearance linked to something, or someone, in the past?"--Print back cover.

Title The Whakatōhea mandate inquiry report.
Author New Zealand. Waitangi Tribunal, author.
ISBN 9781869563301 PDF
Projected Publication Date 1805
Physical Details 1 online resource
Summary "The claimants were several Whakatōhea groups, and they objected to the Crown's recognition of the Whakatōhea Pre-Settlement Claims Trust's deed of mandate. That mandate was for the negotiation of Whakatōhea's historical Treaty of Waitangi claims. The central complaint was that the Crown had breached the principles of the Treaty by failing to actively protect the claimants' ability to exercise their rangatiratanga and decide for themselves how they would settle their historical claims. The report looks at whether the Crown's decision to recognise the claims trust's deed of mandate was fair and reasonable and made in good faith. The Tribunal found that the Crown had failed to act reasonably, honourably, and in good faith and had thus breached the Treaty principles of partnership and active protection"--Publisher information.

Summary  "The paper reviews data on long-term changes in the age structure of the New Zealand population. It sets out trends and projections for the age structure of the national population, and for associated measures of dependency. It describes the influences on age structure of fertility, mortality, and migration. Disaggregated results on age structure are presented, including ethnic differentials, regional variations, and fluctuations within narrowly-defined age groups. Comparisons are made with other OECD countries. Uncertainty, the likelihood of continued life expectancy gains, and life expectancy and health at older ages are discussed."--Publisher's website.

Summary: "In this paper, modern portfolio measures of performance are applied to the New Zealand central government's assets and liabilities. The results of this analysis show the position of the government's portfolio relative to its individual holdings. Using this analysis, alternative uses of budget surpluses are considered: reducing domestic debt, reducing foreign debt, increasing lending to students, and investing in equities. Greater investment in equities, by the government, stands out as improving the performance of the portfolio (ie lower volatility and greater returns)."--Publisher's website.

Title  The built-in flexibility of income and consumption taxes in New Zealand / John Creedy and Norman Gemmell.

Author  Creedy, John, 1949- author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/05.

Summary  "This paper provides estimates of individual and aggregate revenue elasticities of income and consumption taxes in New Zealand, based on the 2001 tax structure and expenditure patterns. Using analytical expressions for revenue elasticities at the individual and aggregate levels, together with a simulated income distribution, values for New Zealand were obtained. Results using equi-proportional income changes suggest that the aggregate income and consumption tax revenue elasticities are both fairly constant as mean income increases, at around 1.3 and 0.95 respectively. This latter estimate assumes that increases in disposable income are accompanied by approximately proportional increases in total expenditure. If there is a tendency for the savings proportion to increase as disposable income increases, a somewhat lower total consumption tax revenue elasticity, of around 0.9, is obtained for 2001 income levels. However, non-equiproportional income changes are more realistic. Allowing for regression towards the geometric mean income reduces these elasticities, giving an elasticity for income and consumption taxes combined that is only slightly above unity. Examination of the tax-share weighted expenditure elasticities for various goods also revealed that, despite the adoption of a broad based GST at a uniform rate in New Zealand, the persistence of various excises has an important effect on the overall consumption tax revenue elasticity, especially for individuals at relatively low income levels."--Publisher's website.

Title  A case study in devolution : the problem of preserving kiwi habitat in the Far North / Megan Claridge & Suzi Kerr.

Author  Claridge, Megan, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 98/07a.

Summary  "Many past and potential New Zealand reforms involve significant devolution, i.e. the transfer of authority to make decisions on behalf of society from a higher to a lower level of government. In particular the Resource Management Act (RMA), the health and education reforms, and decisions about the institutions for addressing Māori issues have led to significant devolution of authority. Employment policy and social welfare are areas where devolution is an important policy option. The role and function of local government also is inherently an issue of the appropriate level of devolution. Many of these reforms have now been in place for a number of years, so it is appropriate to review our experience of devolution, identify the successes, and attempt to address the problems that have arisen."--Publisher's website.

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 00/13.

Summary: "This paper summarises recent research on changes in New Zealand's income distribution. It describes how the income distribution has changed during the period 1981 to 1996. It then looks at factors accounting for these changes in the income distribution. The main focus is on social trends, such as household composition, and changes in individual characteristics, such as age, qualifications and employment status."--Publisher's website.

Summary: "This paper explores five main questions regarding the gender distribution of work, primarily in the context of couples with young children. These are: how much total paid and unpaid work is carried out in New Zealand?; how is this work shared between women and men?; how does this compare with other countries?; how might the mix of unpaid and paid work change in New Zealand in the future?; and should gender equity in paid and unpaid work be a key part of the discussion about labour market participation rates?"--Publisher's website.

Author  Szeto, Kam Leong, 1963- author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/25.

Summary  "This paper investigates and compares the dynamic properties of the New Zealand Treasury model (NZTM) and the current version of the Reserve Bank’s Forecasting and Policy System model (FPS). The main use of both models is to produce macroeconomic forecasts. The NZTM model produces forecasts that are used as an input into the final forecast numbers presented in the Economic and Fiscal Updates. The FPS model is used to produce the published forecasts in the Reserve Bank’s quarterly Monetary Policy Statement. Both models contain a number of judgements around the structure of the economy, the key shocks that impact on the economy, and how the economy evolves in response to these shocks."--Publisher's website.

Title  The contributions from firm entry, exit and continuation to labour productivity growth in New Zealand / David Law and Nathan McLellan.

Author  Law, David, 1979- author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 05/01.

Summary  "This paper evaluates the contributions from firm entry, exit and continuation to labour productivity growth in New Zealand over the period 1995 to 2003. Decomposition techniques developed by Griliches and Regev (1995) and by Foster, Haltiwanger and Krizan (1998) are employed. Results suggest significant heterogeneity across both industries and firms. Most entering firms’ initial level of labour productivity is below the industry average but grows rapidly thereafter. Continuing firms generally add to industry labour productivity growth. On average exiting firms experience stagnant or declining labour productivity in the years leading up to their death, and when they eventually die most have below average labour productivity compared to their industry. This pattern persists even at a highly disaggregated industry level and indicates that firm turnover has positively contributed to labour productivity growth in New Zealand."--Publisher's website.

Title: A dynamic computable general equilibrium (CGE) model of the New Zealand economy / Kam Leong Szeto.
Author: Szeto, Kam Leong, 1963- author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 02/07.
Summary: "This paper documents the structure and key properties of a computable general equilibrium (CGE) model of the New Zealand economy. It is a three-good, small open economy model, which features a well-developed production block. This production block has been estimated as a system using Full Information Maximum Likelihood. Another key feature of the model is that it has a two-tiered structure: the steady-state version of the model and the dynamic version of the model. Using the steady-state version of the model, a macroeconomic balance measure of New Zealand's equilibrium exchange rate can be derived. Furthermore, the steady-state model provides estimates of potential output, which is used to measure the level of excess demand in the economy. The dynamic model is used to trace the dynamic response of a range of macroeconomic variables to various shocks such as changes to world prices for exports and changes to government policy."--Publisher's website.

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/31.
Summary  "Using the capital stock series recently released by Statistics New Zealand, two approaches have been employed to estimate a production function. The first approach is based on the estimation of a constant elasticity of substitution (CES) production function with a value added form. The second approach is based on a nested CES function. Using the nested structure, we allow imports as an intermediate input in the production block. The estimated results reveal that the data rejects the Cobb-Douglas specification and the use of the value added form is not justifiable."--Publisher's website.

Summary "Jean Batten became an international icon in the 1930s. A brave, beautiful woman, she made a number of heroic solo flights across the world. The newspapers couldn’t get enough of her; and yet she suddenly slipped out of view, disappearing to the Caribbean with her mother and dying in obscurity in Majorca, buried in a pauper's grave"--Publisher information.

Summary: "Held captive in a strange city, Dana dreams of fire and flight. There is something she must find, but she does not know what it is, or why it is important. If only her dreams would let her rest. Half a world away, Will studies a new, exciting discipline. But while enchantress N'tombe is impressed by his newfound skills, inside he feels only desperation. A terrible moment is approaching. Soon, Dana must face her final ordeal. Will this new power enough to save her? And is he prepared for what might happen next? In this thrilling conclusion to the award-winning Soul Necklace Stories, Will and Dana must make a heart-breaking choice. A choice that will change their world forever"--Print back cover.

Summary  "When a sorcerer's apprentice locks a powerful spirit in a tree, the nomadic tribes of the arctic face a bleak future. Supplies of game and fish dwindle, and young men desert their families on a quest of illusory dreams. Included in the expedition to deal with the vengeful tree spirit are young Dorno and the woman he rescued, Sheena. He is seeking high adventure; she is in search of her foster parents. Neither of them is aware of the far more terrible foe that lurks in the shade of the tree. This first volume of a trilogy weaves together elements of science fiction and fantasy to produce an exploration of human needs and values."--Print back cover.
