The New Zealand National Bibliography (NZNB) contains catalogue records for the New Zealand imprint. It is produced monthly (12 issues per year). The National Library of New Zealand has responsibility for producing the Bibliography. Most of the material listed is received by the National Library of New Zealand under the Legal Deposit provisions of the National Library Act 1965, Section 30A, amended 1994. It includes New Zealand and Tokelau books, serials, newspapers, music, maps, videos, sound recordings, kits, and pictures. Items are included after they have been received at the National Library. The catalogue records produced meet international standards.

This document contains all the items that have been catalogued during the month of June 2018. The items are grouped under the main subject schedules of the Dewey Decimal Classification system. Within each subject grouping the items are arranged alphabetically by title.

Contents  The history of translated children's literature in New Zealand -- Specific conditions of the New Zealand children's book market -- Case studies.
Series  Kinder- und Jugendkultur, -literatur und -medien Bd. 92.
Summary  "In 2005, a new publisher [Gecko Press] entered the New Zealand market - the first to specialise in English translations of children's books. The notion of "homegrown translations" was a new departure for a postcolonial book market dominated for several decades by literary nationalism. This study aims to illuminate the history of translated children's books in New Zealand and the sociocultural context in which the translations of this new publisher are produced and received in order to account for the peculiarities of marketing and reception associated with them. For this purpose, diachronic and synchronic perspectives are combined with case studies of individual books and series."--Publisher's website.

Physical Details 241 pages : illustrations ; 22 cm
Summary "Messenger, trickster, psychopomp, Mercury’s myriad forms belie a genuinely complex character. And yet to most modern astrologers he remains a relatively one-dimensional figure. Caton’s Hermetic triptycha is designed to ground you in the actual observation of Mercury as a living planetary phenomenon, and to bring the lessons of this planetary divinity back to the world of applied astrology. Before the common era, Mesopotamium astrologers knew the intricate movements of the visible planets and could accurately predict their movements. This gave birth to detailed ephemerides and symbolic facsimiles of the sky, but ironically, it also gave rise to an astrology that could be practiced in isolation from the vast temple of the living heavens. In Hellenistic times, astrologers subsequently lost touch with their observational roots, and, like prisoners in Plato’s cave, they mistook the shadows of things for the luminous sides. Mercury's dynamic phases, his nodes and transits, the shapes of his retrograde loops, & his propensity to spend more time in one elemental triplicity than all the others combined, have critical applications in practical astrology. Going far beyond sign, house, & aspect, they provide the crucial contexts for understanding the meaning & purpose of Mercury at any given moment. Each volume of Hermetica Triptycha explores a unique dimension of this multifaceted planetary divinity, revivifying his ancient knowledge for a modern audience"--Back cover.

Summary  "A Vision Splendid is the biography of William Jellie (1865-1963), a pioneering Unitarian minister and educator and a key figure in the history of Unitarianism in New Zealand. In a world where religion is increasingly associated with hatred, bigotry, fanaticism, violence and misogyny, Jellie’s story provides an alternative – a vision splendid – where values rooted in the liberal religious tradition are the very ones required to promote social justice, protect the powerless and reduce social and economic inequality. It is a story we can turn to for inspiration as we continue to work for fairness in society, equality of opportunity, and the enrichment of the human spirit. Jellie who was born in Ireland and educated at London University and Manchester College, Oxford, began his career as minister to a Unitarian chapel and associated mission in an impoverished part of London. After a brief ministry in a quiet provincial town, he was ready for another challenge. Attracted by New Zealand’s reputation for progressive social and economic reform, in 1900 he took on the leadership of a fledgling Unitarian movement in Auckland. Apart from a war time ministry in England he remained in New Zealand for the rest of his life, serving congregations in Auckland, Wellington, and Timaru. At nearly sixty years of age, at a time when many people start to think about retirement, Jellie began a new career in adult education. For the next fourteen years he was a tutor for the Workers Educational Association, an organization providing higher education to working-class people and trade union members unable to attend university. Throughout his long life Jellie lived out the Unitarian values of freedom of thought, tolerance, commitment to social justice and the use of reason in religion. This is a fascinating account of how those values were articulated in his own life and the lives of those he came into contact with in the United Kingdom and New Zealand"--From publisher's website.

Summary  "The colors of LEGO bricks cover a wide spectrum and allow builders to carefully design models. Besides the colors currently in production, the LEGO company released more than 180 different colors over the years. This book ... includes accurate photographs for each brick color. It provides precise color definitions that are based on actual colorimetric measurements. Each color is compared to its nearest matches ... The book bridges the different naming and identification systems of the LEGO company and Bricklink."--Publisher information.

Physical Details 263 pages : colour illustrations ; 26 cm

Summary "Aesop, an illiterate slave, is the only survivor of a storm tossed galley ship that flounders in Southern seas and washes up, a wreck, on the coast of a great southern continent. Aesop assumes it to be the legendary Austral Land, an idea first voiced by Aristotle, and sets out in exploration. For many years Aesop travels the great island continent of Australia (for surely that's what it was) up and down from coast to coast, learning the ways of the birds and other animals that he encounters and tells, in fables, of things he has seen and heard but can never put to writing. Much might have been lost, but for the Cockatoos, who took it upon themselves to commit to memory the great fabulist's stories, passing them down, family through family, for millennia. They ensured that the fables were told over and again, not the smallest detail lost, none allowed to slip from memory. Now, in this time of great change, artist Ray Ching has undertaken a series of elaborate and cleverly constructed paintings to form a permanent pictorial archive for the fables"—Publisher's description.

Summary: "Toby Robinson has grown up with his uncle's stories and wants to join the navy. His uncle finds him a post as cabin boy on His Majesty's Bark Endeavour, under Captain James Cook, in the hope that it will put his nephew off a life at sea. Assisting the ship's one-handed cook, John, Toby shares this historic voyage, its purpose to track the passage of Venus across the face of the sun, then to seek Terra Australis Incognita, believed to exist, but at the moment just a shape placed on the map by cartographers. The sailors, artists and scientists who shared the voyage come to life in this story, seen through the eyes of twelve-year-old Toby, who brings to life the trials and tribulations of life at sea, as well as the wonders of the South Sea Islands and the naming of places discovered during the voyage"--Back cover.

Summary: "Carrie-Ann Stedman, an advertising executive, who has excelled in the world she occupies, is told by her boss she is to train a new hire, a woman who Carrie has very bad feelings toward. Holly Fletcher, the newbie, once stole a very important client away from Carrie, a fact that Carrie has never forgiven. Thrown together to make a presentation and trade show the best the company have ever seen, they must overcome their own obstacles and resentments to work together and build a working relationship that will make the company succeed. Add in a high mix of attraction and sexual chemistry, they struggle to fight the urges that push them together and the obstacles that pull them apart. Carrie's mistrust of Holly's motives and Holly's guilt over the accident that landed her younger sister in a facility for brain damaged adults, may have just left the bridge of doubt too insurmountable to find the happiness they both crave"--Provided by publisher.

Series  Bloomsbury studies in classical reception.
Summary  Euripides' Bacchae is the magnum opus of the ancient world's most popular dramatist. Yet the play is the most modern, perhaps postmodern, of ancient plays. Twentieth-century poets and playwrights often turned their hand to Bacchae, leaving the play with an especially rich and varied translation history. It has also been subjected to several fashions of criticism and interpretation over the years, all reflected in, influencing, and influenced by translation. This book examines a selection of English translations from the early 20th century to the early 21st and sets them in their scholarly context. Simon Perris presents a fascinating cultural history of one of world theatre's landmark classics. He explores the reception of the classical ideal in a violent and turmoil-ridden era. He illustrates the enduring appeal of Dionysus and Bacchae in a secular milieu and demonstrates by example that translation matters, or should matter, to readers, actors, directors, students, and scholars of ancient drama.

Title As it was: growing up in Grey Lynn and Ponsonby between the wars / Russell Stone.

Contents My beginnings -- In the shadow of the Gluepot -- My father's family -- My mother's family -- My father's war -- My family in the 1920s -- The time of the crowded house -- I learn to 'aim high' -- How I became Proficient -- Religion and youth groups -- 'A woman's work is never done!' -- 'It gets you out of the house' -- 'Ain't we got fun?' -- Going to the pictures -- Comics, annuals and books of that ilk -- Listening in -- Mens sana in corpore sano -- Peace and war -- The end of my beginnings.

Summary Russell Stone has reached an age and stage in life where he can be regarded not just as an historian but as part of the stuff of history itself, someone qualified to tell at first-hand just what life was like when he was young. Things, he says, were vastly different. When he was born in 1923, Greater Auckland had a population of 165,000. Today the figure is one and a half million. But mere numbers fail to convey how different interwar life was. Life was simpler, relatively uncomplicated. But it was also harsher, with much hard physical labour for men and women alike. The memory of the Great War was still raw and although the attitudes and practices of our colonial past were still to be seen on every hand, Auckland, just like New Zealand as a whole, was already passing over the threshold to modernity. Electrical power, motorised transport, new recreational facilities, liberalising educational policies, a redefinition of the Empire, and much else were initiating changes, which seemingly modest at the time, are now to be seen as forerunners of our twenty-first-century way of life. Russell Stone grew up in Ponsonby and Grey Lynn, those close-knit inner suburbs of interwar Auckland that are written about in this book. He was educated at Mount Albert Grammar School and the University of Auckland. After war service he became a secondary-school teacher for thirteen years before joining the staff of the History Department at the University of Auckland, from which he retired in 1989 as an Emeritus Professor.

Summary  In 1974 a disenfranchised young man from a broken home set out to do the impossible. John Egenes saddled his horse Gizmo and started down the trail on an adventure across the North American continent. Their seven month journey took them across 11 states from California to Virginia, ocean to ocean. As they left the pressing confinement of the city behind them, the pair experienced the isolation and loneliness of the southwestern desert, the vastness of the prairie, and the great landscapes that make up America. Across hundreds of miles of empty land they slept with coyotes and wild horses under the stars, and in urban areas they camped alone in graveyards and abandoned shacks. Along the way John and Gizmo were transformed from inexperienced horse and rider to veterans of the trail. With his young horse as his spiritual guide John slowly began to comprehend his own place in the world in a search to find peace within himself. Full of heart and humor, Egenes serves up a tale that's as big as the America he witnessed - an America that no longer exists - on a journey that could only have been experienced step by step, mile by mile, from the view between a horse's ears--Back cover.

The village was officially settled by Canadian immigrants in 1868, but has a history dating back before then. Maori chiefs Patuone and Tamati Waka Nene had a pa site on the site of the present-day village, and in 1845 Samuel Marsden is know to have passed nearby on his way from east to west coast. Over the last 150 years, the village has changed and grown. Ben, James, Tim & Tom son grandes amigos, todos ellos de 10 años y encuentran el árbol perfecto en un bosque cerca de su escuela y comienzan a construir "La Increíble Casa en el Árbol". Las cosas comienzan como una banda desorganizada y empeoran aún más cuando la hermana de Ben, Amanda, descubre que están trabajando en su casa secreta del árbol. Lo siguiente que saben es que las chicas están construyendo la suya, en el mismo árbol, ¡y se ve incluso mejor que la de ellos! ¿Cómo lo están haciendo? ¿Cuál es su arma secreta? Después del accidente, todo cambia y los niños se ven obligados a formar equipo con las chicas, ¡como si eso fuera a funcionar alguna vez!Este libro presenta los conceptos básicos de Gestión de proyectos a los chicos y chicas a través de una historia entretenida y divertida y lecciones sencillas, que les enseño su padre, que es (por supuesto) Gerente de Proyecto, a su hija. Ella aplica lo que ha aprendido y, de repente, las chicas se adelantan a los chicos que recién habían "comenzado a construir", sin un plan. ¡Únete a esta increíble banda de constructores de casas en el árbol, cuatro niñas y cuatro niños, mientras terminan trabajando juntos para tratar de completar el increíble proyecto de la casa en el árbol!"—Back cover.

homewards I meet. But I must finish my story for you first. My future, my descendant,my mokopuna. Listen. 'So begins the tale of James Poneke: orphaned son of a chief, ardent student of English; wide-eyed survivor. All the world's a stage, especially when you're a living exhibit. But anything can happen to a young New Zealander on the savage streets of Victorian London. When James meets the man with laughing dark eyes and the woman who dresses as a man, he begins to discover who people really are beneath their many guises. Although London is everything James most desires, this new world is more dark and dazzling than he Summary "Seventeen-year-old Riki is worried about school and the future, but mostly about his girlfriend, who has suddenly stopped texting him. But on his way to see her, he’s hit by a bus and his life radically changes. Riki wakes up one hundred years earlier in Egypt, in 1915, and finds he’s living through his great-great-grandfather’s experiences in the Māori Contingent. At the same time that Riki tries to make sense of what’s happening and find a way home, we read transcripts of interviews Riki’s great-great-grandfather gave in 1975 about his experiences in this war and its impact on their family. Gradually we realise the fates of Riki and his great-great-grandfather are intertwined"--Publisher information.

Summary: "At home Lucy Sorrenson feels like the only responsible adult. Her father acts like a teenage muso. Her grandad’s grasp on reality is slipping away and she’s sick of looking after everything. She wants to be in the school play, go to the cast parties- have fun with her friends. But on opening night she is called to the stage door and … no one will believe the role she now has to play. She has been chosen to save the world. “My name is Charity, Sister Charity … we’ve been observing you for months, my child. You are identical to the young woman in the Master’s visions. You have passed all the tests and are known to us as The Maiden, the chosen vessel for the seed of our Master.”“The…the seed of the WHAT?”--Back cover.

Summary  "Lucia’s health is rapidly deteriorating, and she must leave the Dark Realm and travel to the Light side before she becomes gravely ill. Chello takes her to the water’s edge of the great river separating the realms. He can go no further as his powers are the antithesis to the Light Realm. Lucia insists that he help her cross the river, but once Chello sets foot in the Light Realm, the land becomes violent with massive storms and high winds uprooting everything in their path. Together they run for their lives, but Lucia’s health is failing, and she is unable to keep up with Chello. Chello has no alternative but to leave her and return to the Dark side before the light side is frozen in time for a thousand years. Chello leaves, the storm abates, and Lucia sleeps in the undergrowth until she is woken by Father Michael"--Back cover.

Summary: "An Angel in the Undergrowth: The Rebirth is set in two conflicting realms, a Dark Realm and a Light Realm. Lucia Puccini is born a golden Angel and is part mortal and part mythical. Legend says Lucia's fate is that she will die, but her mother's beliefs differ and she gives her daughter to the undergrowth where she will be safe. Sixteen years later, Lucia is rebirthed and faces many challenges in adjusting to her new life. Chello Barleti is also mortal and mythical and is a guardian of the Dark Realms. His ancestors and family are trapped by a curse and to release the curse he must become a gothic knight. Chello lives in a 17th Century church ruin sanctuary where his ancestors and living family visit. Otto, an ogre and Chello's companion helps with the rebirthings and Chello's tasks. Mythicals living in the Dark Realm are given the opportunity to choose to live as a mortal on the Light side or remain as a mythical on the Dark side. If they stay there are rules and consequences if the rules are broken"--Back cover.

Summary "Working as the Chief Engineer onboard the ESAS Chariot out of Europe, Commander Camille Rey expected her position to be somewhat challenging on occasion. She did not expect to be fighting for her and her fellow crewmen’s lives immediately after take-off. Teaming up with the very proper, and very English Captain Noah Vaughan to combat a desperate saboteur onboard their vessel, Camille discovers that not all the malfunctions the Chariot is experiencing are human-related. Secrets and desires are exposed amongst the stars and plasma fire, but can the captain and the chief overcome their cultural differences? And can any of them hope to survive the treacherous voyage to New Earth unscathed?"--Description.

Title  Automatic fiscal stabilisers / Kerryn Fowlie.

Author  Fowlie, Kerryn, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 99/07.

Summary  "This paper looks at the use of automatic fiscal stabilisers, particularly in relation to New Zealand's experience over the past business cycle. Allowing the automatic stabilisers to operate in response to cyclical fluctuations in output is likely to yield efficiency gains in a country with a sound fiscal position and a credible approach to medium-term fiscal stability. However, automatic stabilisation does increase the potential for fiscal ill discipline. A risk is that an imprudent Government could allow the automatic stabilisers to operate during a downturn and not bank the gains in the upturn. The discipline imposed by the FRA in New Zealand helps ensure that the Government acts prudently. And a sound underlying fiscal position ensures that when policy action is required, it can be undertaken in a measured manner. Reflecting this, the New Zealand Government has allowed the automatic stabilisers to operate to a greater extent during the most recent recession than during the 1991 recession."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "Warrant-taker Jazen Lav accepts one last assignment before she retires to follow her dreams. She's hot on the trail of a runaway cyborg, but the path leads to the crew of the Indefatigable and they're a tight-lipped bunch. Frustration steers her to an undercover gig as a nurse, which places her in the sights of the flirtatious Indy pilot. Nanu left his home planet at a young age, missing the last crucial elements of his training before he hit adulthood. The inner beast he thought dead leaps to life on meeting Jazen, taking him by surprise and tossing him into confusion. His inner beast insists Jazen is his mate, but she's trouble for him, trouble for his friends, trouble for his future. Abduction and betrayal—not the best way to start a courtship, and that's where the turmoil begins since danger stalks into the city with Nanu and Jazen directly in its sights"--Introduction.

Casper, the spirited Arabian / Kelly Wilson.

1 online resource

"When Vicki hears about a difficult Arabian that no one wants, she will stop at nothing to save him. Years of misunderstanding have left Casper wayward and mistrustful, but Vicki senses a gentle soul beneath the pony's rough exterior. Vicki must learn the importance of patience and compromise to have any chance of winning over the high-strung gelding. Will Casper ever trust humans again? And will Vicki be able to uncovery the potential she sees in the spirited Arabian?"--Publisher information.

Summary  "Victory is close at hand, but freedom remains frustratingly just beyond the grasp of German physicist Dr. Kristopher Lehrer, Resistance fighter Michel, and the remaining members of the team sent by the Allies - Captain Matt Bryant, Sergeant Ken Lowe, and Dr. Zhou Liang - as they fight to keep the atomic plans from the Nazis. The team reaches France and connects with members of Michel’s French Resistance cell in Normandy. Allied troops are poised to liberate France, and rescue is supposedly at hand. However, Kristopher is no longer sure the information he carries in his memory is safe with either side. When Standartenführer Holm and his men finally catch up with their prey, the team is left with few options. With a traitor in their midst, who can they trust? Kristopher realizes he must become something he is not in order to save the man he loves. Death is biding his time, and sacrifices must be made for any of them to have the futures they want."

Ben, James, Tim & Tom son grandes amigos, todos ellos de 10 años y encuentran el árbol perfecto en un bosque cerca de su escuela y comienzan a construir “La Increíble Casa en el Árbol”. Las cosas comienzan como una banda desorganizada y empeoran aún más cuando la hermana de Ben, Amanda, descubre que están trabajando en su casa secreta del árbol. Lo siguiente que saben es que las chicas están construyendo la suya, en el mismo árbol, ¡y se ve incluso mejor que la de ellos! ¿Cómo lo están haciendo? ¿Cuál es su arma secreta? Después del accidente, todo cambia y los niños se ven obligados a formar equipo con las chicas, ¡como si eso fuera a funcionar alguna vez! Este libro presenta los conceptos básicos de Gestión de proyectos a los chicos y chicas a través de una historia entretenida y divertida y lecciones sencillas, que les enseño su padre, que es (por supuesto) Gerente de Proyecto, a su hija. Ella aplica lo que ha aprendido y, de repente, las chicas se adelantan a los chicos que recién habían "comenzado a construir", sin un plan. ¡Únete a esta increíble banda de constructores de casas en el árbol, cuatro niñas y cuatro niños, mientras terminan trabajando juntos para tratar de completar el increíble proyecto de la casa en el árbol!"--Print back cover.

Title: Encouraging quality regulation: theories and tools / Kevin Guerin.

Author: Guerin, K., author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource

Summary: "Achieving good regulatory outcomes normally requires high quality design, implementation and review of the regulatory regime. Major regulatory theories focus on concepts such as the public interest, the role of interest groups, and regulatory capture to explain why regulations come into existence. Regulatory design, however, exists at two levels. Downstream design involves creating a regime to give the appropriate incentives to firms and consumers. Upstream design seeks to incentivise regulators themselves to create and operate high quality regulatory regimes. This paper focuses on the latter."--Publisher's website.

“When Fiona catches her husband cheating, she puts a full stop on their marriage. No longer prepared to take his abusive behavior, she kicks him out the door, determined to embrace change. A vacation is the perfect way to attack her courageous new life. Stig is the youngest of five polar bear shifters, and his scheme to start an ice trucking business puts him and his brothers on an untraditional path. With everyone in Churchill against them - humans and shifters plus their matriarch - it’s a challenge to get their ice trucks on the road. Fiona meets the sexy Stig and his gorgeous brother in Gillam. With their bulging muscles and stunning Nordic looks, something about the smiling duo imbues trust. Then, she meets their three older brothers, each charming and handsome, and her libido swings into overdrive. A dilemma since they’re openly interested in her, and choosing one? Impossible. The Swenson brothers adore Fiona, and she brings out the best in them. Now that her vacation is ending, she’s discussing a return to Florida, but that might not be the worse of the trouble when menace stalks into Churchill and threatens to end their reverse harem forever.”

Summary  "As part of the 2014 national election the first of a two-part referendum was held to determine whether or not Aotearoa New Zealand will fly a new flag design. Should the outcome be affirmative then the public will be able to submit their design ideas for consideration. The exhibition Flag It!, where New Zealander’s could showcase their design ideas to the public, was organised by Depot Artspace where it was held. In November the exhibition travelled to No. 1 Parnell St in Rawene where many new submissions were featured. This publication documents the debate, the exhibition and the individual ideas behind each unique submission"--http://depotartspace.co.nz/flag-it/.

Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 05/11.

"This work provides an update of changes in the income distribution over the period from 1998-2004, using data from the Household Labour Force Survey's annual Income Supplement (HLFS-IS). We focus on changes in working-age individuals' earnings and total income distribution and, to allow for resource sharing within households, their equivalised household total income distribution over the period. Our analysis shows that there have been broad gains in income across the distribution, suggesting the spoils of growth have been shared widely across the income distribution. Mean and median individual earnings increased 15 percent and 23 percent respectively, while mean and median individual income both increased 12-13 percent and equivalised household income by 11 percent. Inequality, as measured by the Gini coefficient, was more stable: individual earnings inequality fell 4 percent; individual income inequality was unchanged, while equivalised household income inequality increased 2-3 percent. The main contributors to the observed changes appear to be employment and real wage growth. We estimate that roughly one-half of the growth in average individual incomes is due to employment growth, and one-quarter each to demographic changes and wage growth. We also find that the relative employment and wage contributions have varied across the distribution: income gains at the lower end of the income distributions have been largely driven by employment, while changes at the higher end have been driven by wage gains."--Publisher's website.

Title  Labour supply incentives in alternative tax and transfer schemes : a diagrammatic introduction / John Creedy.

Author  Creedy, John, 1949- author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/08.

Summary  "The aim of this paper is to illustrate some of the complexities involved in modelling the incentive effects of taxes and transfers, using only basic diagrammatic methods. It describes a range of diagrams which are helpful in thinking about the design of tax and transfer systems and their potential effects on labour supply behaviour. Emphasis is given to the role of highly nonlinear budget constraints and the resulting wide range of labour supply responses."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "Maggie was a young, naïve sheltered woman who, through a tragedy, was pushed into a world of abuse and torment at the hands of a man she thought she was in love with. Alone, scared, and helpless, she prayed for help. That was until she received a telephone call which changed her world, and led her to the bright lights of Auckland. Maggie thought finally she was safe. Nothing would prepare her for what was to follow. From out of nowhere, she met a man who would give her a reason to live, laugh, and learn to love. Was she strong enough to believe that beautiful things came to those who dared to dream? Or would the memory of her abuse etched into the depths of her mind take control, and send her back to her secret dark place, alone and frightened once more. Could the light of a rainbow shine brightly from the depths of a cold gray nothing?"--Blurb

Series
Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 00/02.

Summary
"The paper sets out a generic approach to the Long Term Fiscal Model (LTFM). The main purpose of the LTFM is to produce Progress Outlooks for Fiscal Strategy Reports. Progress Outlooks of the fiscal position are required by the Fiscal Responsibility Act 1994. The LTFM uses demographic, economic and policy assumptions to project expenses, revenue, assets and liabilities. The projections start from the end of the three-year forecasts in Economic and Fiscal Updates. Projections are usually presented as scenarios to highlight the uncertainty around the projections. The manual contains a technical description of the model and discusses procedures for using the model. A copy of the model is attached to the paper. It is a large spreadsheet run on Excel 97, "--Publisher's website.

Title: New Zealand's diaspora and overseas-born population / John Bryant and David Law.

Author: Bryant, John, 1969- author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/13.

Summary: "Many New Zealand-born people migrate overseas, creating a diaspora, and many overseas-born people migrate to New Zealand. Both the diaspora and the overseas-born population in New Zealand may facilitate the international exchange of goods and ideas. Much discussion of international linkages has, however, been limited by a lack of data on numbers of people involved. Based mainly on place-of-birth data from national censuses, this paper provides estimates of the size and structure of New Zealand’s diaspora and overseas-born population, as well as comparisons with selected OECD countries such as Australia. A tentative conclusion is that the potential contribution of New Zealand’s diaspora may have been overestimated, and the contribution of the overseas-born population underestimated."--Publisher's website.

Subject: New Zealand Emigration and immigration.

New Zealand's production structure : an international comparison / Iris Claus and Kathy Li.

Author: Claus, Iris, author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/16.

Summary: "The purpose of this paper is to compare New Zealand’s production structure in the mid-1990s to that in other OECD countries using input output analysis. Comparable inter industry transactions tables to the New Zealand data are available for Australia, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Norway and the United Kingdom. The composition of total supply and value added is examined across countries. Backward and forward linkages, indices of industry interconnectedness, a value added production multiplier, a cumulated primary input coefficient for compensation of employees and a measure of import content of final demand output are calculated, taking into account direct and indirect transactions. New Zealand’s industrial structure is broadly similar to that in other OECD countries. Some differences arise as certain industries are more important in some countries. New Zealand’s exports appear to be more diversified and have a large value added content. Moreover, the return to capital, as measured by the share of gross operating surplus in value added, is high."--Publisher's website.

Summary "Ethan Leavitt arrives in the idyllic village of Oakwood to search for a missing friend. Having always prided himself on his ability to find rational explanations, Ethan's trust in concrete evidence and logic is tested by the mystery of Oakwood and Tomas's disappearance. Donovan Campbell’s happy, sometimes flippant, exterior hides a past he’d rather forget. As he struggles with his memories and to hold on to the inn he owns with his best friend, the last thing Donovan needs is for some guy he’s only just met to start getting under his skin. When a bank robbery escalates into a dangerous situation, Donovan must embrace a part of himself he can no longer ignore in order to save a future that might never have the chance to exist. Ethan learns that often the person you’re looking for is not the one you find. But have he and Donovan both realized that too late…?"

Title Population ageing and government health expenditures in New Zealand, 1951-2051 / John Bryant, Audrey Teasdale, Martin Tobias, Jit Cheung and Mhairi McHugh.
Author Bryant, John, 1969- author.
Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/14.
Summary "The paper uses a simulation model to assess the effects of population ageing on government health expenditures in New Zealand. Population ageing is defined to include disability trends and "distance to death"; government health expenditures are defined to include both acute and long-term care. The model results suggest that population ageing is associated with a large increase in expenditure share of people aged 65 and over, which rises from about 29% of total government health expenditure in 1951 to 63% in 2051. Analysis of demographic and health trends over the period 1951 to 2002 suggests, however, that these trends account for only a small proportion of the total growth in health expenditure. Most expenditure growth is attributable to other factors, such as an expansion in the range of treatments provided, and increases in input prices such as wages. Growth in this non-demographic component of health expenditures has reached 3-4% per year over recent years. Projection results for the period 2002 to 2051 suggest that restraining government expenditure on health to 6-12% of GDP would require long-run growth rates for the non-demographic component of health expenditure that are significantly lower than current rates. In other words, future demographic changes may be less threatening than is often assumed, but it would still not be possible to maintain current growth rates for government health expenditure and avoid substantial increases in the ratio between expenditure and GDP."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "It is widely recognised that as the population ages there will be potentially significant implications for a wide range of economic variables, including in particular the fiscal costs of social expenditures. Long term fiscal planning requires estimates of the possible future path of public spending. This paper presents projections for 14 categories of social spending. These projections are based on detailed demographic estimates covering fertility, migration and mortality disaggregated by single year of age and gender. Distributional parameters are incorporated for all of the major variables, and are used to build up probabilistic projections for social expenditure as a share of GDP using simulation. Attention is focussed on health expenditures which are disaggregated into seven broad classes. In addition we explore the impacts of alternative hypothesis about future health costs. While it can be predicted with some confidence that overall social expenditures will rise, the results suggest that long term planning would be enriched by recognising the distributions about point estimates of projected social costs."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "New Zealand's ageing population is expected to have a significant impact on long-term government expenditure, particularly in the areas of health and superannuation. Recent projections from Treasury's Long-Term Fiscal Model suggest that, under current policy settings, government expenditure (excluding financing costs) will increase by approximately seven percentage points of GDP by 2050. From the perspective of economic efficiency, we consider several methods for financing that expenditure."--Publisher's website.

Title  Population ageing in New Zealand: the impact on living standards and the optimal rate of saving with a flexible real exchange rate / Ross Guest, Grant Scobie and John Bryant.

Author  Guest, Ross, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource: colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 03/34.

Summary  "The purpose of this paper is to extend the simulation analysis of population ageing in Guest, Bryant and Scobie (2003). In that paper a single-good Ramsey-Solow model was calibrated for New Zealand and used to simulate the impact of population ageing on optimal national saving and average living standards over the next 100 years. There are several innovations in the present paper. One is to allow for tradable and non-tradable goods and thereby to introduce a real exchange rate. Changes in the real exchange rate due to population ageing produce substitution effects between tradable and non-tradable goods, in both consumption and investment. Other innovations in this paper are an outward-looking model of utility, a proportion of rule-of-thumb consumers, and a vintage capital model. The simulations of population ageing are conducted by first deriving a range of demographic projections from alternative assumptions about fertility, mortality and immigration. The resulting series for population and employment by age group are weighted to account for age-specific labour productivity levels and consumption demands. The model is solved by finding optimal paths of investment and consumption from an initial steady state to a new steady state following a demographic shock. The sanguine assessment of the impact of population ageing on living standards and national saving in Guest, Bryant and Scobie (2003) remains intact following the extensions applied to the model in this paper. That is, the cost of ageing is equivalent in its effect on living standards to an annual loss of labour productivity growth of about a quarter of one percent over the next 50 years. The optimal path for national saving implies a rise of up to 2% of GDP over the next decade, relative to that which would have been optimal in the absence of population ageing. In all the cases considered, the optimal level of savings then trends down, so that by 2051 it would be about 2 percentage points of GDP lower than the level that would have been optimal were the population age structure to have remained unchanged."--Publisher's website.

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/10.

Summary  "Over the next 50 years, New Zealand's population will age substantially. There has been wide debate about whether New Zealand should prepare for population ageing by increasing national savings. The debate had not, however, involved explicit consideration of possible time paths for savings, consumption, debt, and other relevant macroeconomic variables; nor have explicit principles been offered for determining which of these time paths are to be preferred. This paper addresses the question of choosing time paths through the use of a Ramsey-Solow model of optimal saving, adapted for investigating problems of population ageing. The results suggest that population ageing alone would not justify increases in national savings rates beyond those envisaged by current policy. The cost of ageing in terms of reduced real consumption is not large enough to justify large additional savings beyond those currently predicted, and the concomitant reduction in current consumption. The findings concerning national savings and living standards are robust to a variety of specifications of demographic conditions, interest rates, and productivity growth."--Publisher's website.

Title Poverty, income inequality and health / Ken Judge, Iain Paterson.

Physical Details 1 online resource

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/29.

Summary "The purpose of this report is to consider the legitimacy of the assumption that communities or societies with more unequal income distributions have poorer health outcomes. We present a critical review of the existing international literature on the relationship between income, income inequality and health, in terms of conceptual approaches, research methods and the policy implications drawn from it. Where possible, we also offer some guidance for judging between policy priorities based on the relative importance of income inequality versus other potential causal factors in determining population levels of health. An overview of the potential relationship between income, income inequality and health is set out, followed by a discussion of the methodological and technical issues required to explore these links. A literature review of what we consider to be the key contributions in the income inequality - health debate is presented, as is a re-analysis of data derived from Chapter 3 of Social Inequalities in Health: New Zealand 1999, which focuses on income, income inequality and health. We conclude that the relative effect of income inequality per se as a determinant of population health has been greatly exaggerated. The frequently observed association between income inequality and health at the regional level is likely to be a by-product of the non-linear relationship between individual income and health, although we cannot dismiss the possibility that income inequality may also act as a marker for other area characteristics that influence health. We stress that a life course approach is paramount for any study into the relationship between poverty and health, while the use of multi-level data analysis is fundamental in attempting to establish the relationship between income distribution and area level health status."--Publisher’s website.

Title  Productivity in New Zealand 1988 to 2002 / Melleny Black, Melody Guy and Nathan McLellan.

Author  Black, Melleny, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/06.

Summary  "This paper reports new aggregate and industry productivity series for the New Zealand economy for the period 1988 to 2002. These productivity series are intended for ongoing monitoring of New Zealand’s productivity performance and for use in further analyses investigating the evolution, sources and determinants of New Zealand’s productivity growth. Productivity series are constructed using index number techniques and industry data sourced from Statistics New Zealand. Throughout, comparisons are made with the productivity estimates reported in Diewert and Lawrence’s (1999), Measuring New Zealand’s Productivity. Industry data are also used to construct productivity series that are comparable with the market sector productivity series published by the Australian Bureau of Statistics. The comparison between Australia and New Zealand shows that market sector multifactor productivity has been similar in both countries over the full sample period. Since 1994 average labour productivity growth has been higher in Australia, which reflects the relatively lower rate of physical capital accumulation in New Zealand after 1993. On the other hand, New Zealand’s capital productivity growth has been higher than Australia’s capital productivity growth since 1994, reflecting the relatively higher growth in hours worked in New Zealand."--Publisher's website.

Summary  "This paper provides a review of conceptual and methodological issues in measuring productivity. Attention is given to the concept of productivity and the relationship between productivity and technological change. Different approaches to measuring productivity are surveyed and the results from a number of NZ productivity studies are summarised. The availability of appropriate input and output data is essential for the accurate measurement of productivity and therefore this paper also discusses some important data issues that influence productivity measurement."--Publisher's website.

Title: Publicly financed education in an endogenous growth model / John Creedy and Norman Gemmell.

Author: Creedy, John, 1949- author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 02/24.

Summary: "This paper constructs an endogenous growth model, applicable largely to developing countries, based on human capital accumulation in which education is publicly provided and financed, and schooling is compulsory. Public investment in human and physical capital are financed from taxes on wage and capital income, and consumption. The equilibrium growth properties of the model are examined and the steady-state effects of education and fiscal policy are derived. The specification of the human capital production function and the strength of labour supply effects are shown to be important for the magnitude of steady-state outcomes. Simulations illustrate the model's properties."--Publisher's website.

Title: Qualifications, employment and the value of human capital, 1986-2001 / Dean Hyslop, Dave Maré and Jason Timmins.

Author: Hyslop, Dean Robert, 1962- author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/35.

Summary: "This paper summarises the changing nature of qualifications across the working age population in New Zealand over the period from 1986 to 2001, and investigates the relationships between the changing qualification distribution and employment and income. First, the results confirm that there was a general upskilling of the population, as measured by formal educational qualifications. Second, we examine patterns of qualification change and employment growth measured in job groups, and find that the upskilling of the population occurred across a wide range of job-groups. Also, although the results show the employment growth was strongest in job-groups with high initial levels of skilled workers, employment growth is only weakly related to upskilling. Third, we decompose the change in the value of human capital into contributions due to changes in the qualification mix, changes in the (economic) returns to qualifications, and the interaction between these two factors. The value of human capital increased by 20% over the period: about 75% of this increase can be attributed to increasing incomes holding constant the mix of qualifications, 15-20% to an increasing skill mix, and the residual to interaction effects."--Publisher's website.

Title Reducing Māori and Pacific inequalities / The Treasury.

Physical Details 1 online resource: colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 01/30.

Summary "Over the last fifty years the Māori and non-Māori populations have slowly and unevenly become more similar on a range of key demographic, social and economic outcomes. This has principally been driven by increased geographic and social proximity between the two groups. There is evidence that similar processes may be operating for migrant peoples from the Pacific."--Publisher's website.

Title Sovereign net worth : an analytical framework / Simon Bradbury, Jim Brumby & David Skilling.

Author Bradbury, Simon, author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 99/03.

Summary "The Fiscal Responsibility Act requires the Crown to articulate targets for a series of fiscal variables, including net worth. Given the dramatic improvement in the fiscal position in recent years, a critical policy question relates to how (and which) measures of Crown net worth should be targeted. This paper sets out a framework for targeting Crown net worth. It does so by supplementing the GAAP-based measure with forward-looking information about spending and tax revenue. The paper argues that targeting net worth for the Crown requires the estimation of a path, rather than a static level."--Publisher's website.

Title  Subsidiarity : implications for New Zealand / Kevin Guerin.

Author  Guerin, K., author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 02/03.

Summary  "Subsidiarity requires taking decisions at the level of government best placed to do so, but does not say what that level is. Rather, it gives a broad framework within which to have the debate. Implementing subsidiarity means (1) allocating roles appropriately between levels of government, (2) co-ordinating implementation of decisions, and (3) managing accountability and participation. Subsidiarity does not, however, tell us how to achieve these goals. It is therefore more about how a decision is made than about what the specific decision is. Europe, the United States and Australia have adopted varying solutions to these issues. New Zealand's ability to influence the trans-Tasman outcome is likely to be limited. The main implications for New Zealand are in designing trans-Tasman institutions and allocating responsibilities between central and local government."--Publisher's website.

Title Sustainable development : environment and economic framework integration / Basil M. H. Sharp.

Author Sharp, Basil, author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/27.

Summary "Sustainable development is a multifaceted concept that has drawn on a number of disciplines including economics, ecology, ethics, sociology and political science. Sustainable development links the welfare of generations with the capacity of the biosphere to sustain life and has a policy focus. Sustainable development is not a fixed state but rather a process of change in which resource exploitation, the direction of investment, the orientation of technological development and institutional change are made consistent with the future as well as present needs."--Publisher's website.

Title  Tax smoothing and expenditure creep / Chris Pinfield.
Author  Pinfield, Chris, author.
Physical Details  1 online resource: illustrations
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 98/9.
Summary  "Tax smoothing minimises the economic costs of raising taxes to finance a varying profile of expenditure. This standard result assumes that expenditure pressures do not vary with the short term fiscal position. In the presence of expenditure creep, however, tax smoothing is no longer optimal tax policy."--Publisher's website.
Subject  Taxation New Zealand Econometric models.

Title  Taxation, reranking and equivalence scales / John Creedy and Justin van de Ven.
Author  Creedy, John, 1949- author.
Physical Details  1 online resource: illustrations (some colour)
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury); 03/11.
Summary  "This paper considers whether an equivalence scale implicit in transfer policy can be inferred from summary measures of reranking (whereby the rank order of pre-tax incomes is different from that of the post-tax distribution). It is conjectured that, if the government has a distributional objective and formulates tax policy with a view to equitable treatment of income units, then adopting the scale that is implicit in government transfer policy should identify only the reranking that has no equity foundation. This motivates the question: Is the incidence of reranking associated with a transfer system minimised by the equivalence scale that is implicit in the transfer system? The analysis presented in this paper suggests that the equivalence scale which minimises reranking, while not necessarily equal to the closest approximation to the one that is implicit in transfer policy, is nevertheless in its vicinity."--Publisher's website.

Theories of the family and policy / Veronica Jacobsen, Lindy Fursman, John Bryant, Megan Claridge and Benedikte Jensen.

Author Jacobsen, Veronica, 1951- author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/02.

Summary "Policy interventions that affect or are mediated through the family typically assume a behavioural response. Policy analyses proceeding from different disciplinary bases may come to quite different conclusions about the effects of policies on families, depending how individuals within families behave. This paper identifies the implications of five theories of family and individual behaviour for the likely success of policy intervention. Anthropology documents not only the universality of the family, but also its many forms. Economic theory illustrates the capacity for well-intentioned policy to be thwarted by individual rationality. Evolutionary biology suggests that a number of fundamental drivers of behaviour are genetic predispositions and can be difficult to influence through policy. Sociology emphasises the role of social norms but recognises that individualism limits the influence of society generally on individual behaviour. Understanding the theories of the family emanating from different disciplines can enrich policy analysis by identifying how and why behaviour can be influenced. It also can serve to remind researchers of the resilience of the family and the limits of government intervention."--Publisher's website.

Summary "The potential advantages in flexibility and efficiency of environmental use rights (such as permits and quotas) over prescriptive regulatory approaches have been well surveyed, and are being advocated in New Zealand now as a tool for achieving sustainable development. So why have they not been more widely adopted here? How can government help remove barriers and improve both economic and environmental outcomes in New Zealand?"--Publisher's website.

Title Toward a model of firm productivity dynamics / David Law, Bob Buckle and Dean Hyslop.

Author Law, David, 1979- author.

Physical Details 1 online resource : illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 06/11.

Summary "A common finding from international research on firm productivity dynamics is that within-firm productivity dynamics tend to dominate the effects of firm entry and exit on aggregate productivity. The aim of this paper is to explore the suitability of Statistics New Zealand’s Business Demography (BD) and Goods and Services Tax (GST) data as a basis for modelling within-firm productivity dynamics. The paper first analyses and describes the cross-sectional and time-series properties of sales, purchases and a value-added measure of labour productivity. Cross-sectional results reveal a great deal of heterogeneity in average sales, purchases and labour productivity both across and within industries and cohorts. Univariate time-series properties of these variables are remarkably similar and sales and purchases are highly correlated contemporaneously. Transition probabilities are also calculated for movement of firms between quartiles of the labour productivity distribution over varying lengths of time. In order to understand the processes driving the data, a simple statistical model for sales, purchases and value-added per unit of employment is developed to calibrate to the stylised empirical facts. The model does a remarkably good job at mimicking the properties of the BD and GST data."--Publisher's website.

Title Towards an inclusive economy / The Treasury.

Physical Details 1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/15.

Summary "There has recently been a rapid growth in international literature and research on the links between economic growth and social capability and their impact upon well-being. This paper draws on that literature to build upon previous Treasury work at the intersection of economic and social policy. It examines the relationship between a productive economy and a society that enjoys high levels of participation, connection and cohesion, and their combined impact of peoples' well-being. It suggests that the objective in an inclusive economy is to improve the well-being of New Zealanders by directing policy to ensure that there are broad based opportunities to participate in society and the economy."--Publisher's website.

Title: Trade and migration to New Zealand / John Bryant, Murat Genç and David Law.
Author: Bryant, John, author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/18.
Summary: "This paper examines the hypothesis that a greater stock of migrants in New Zealand from a particular country leads to more trade between that country and New Zealand. The literature suggests that migrants can stimulate trade by lowering transaction costs, and by bringing with them preferences for goods produced in their home country. We use panel data techniques within the framework of a standard gravity model of trade. Our sample includes an average of over 170 countries for the years 1981 to 2001. Previous studies of trade and migration have not dealt satisfactorily with problems of unobserved heterogeneity and selection bias. We address these problems using correlated random effects and selection models. Results suggest that larger migrant stocks are associated with higher trade flows."--Publisher's website.

Author: Goh, Khoon Lek, 1973- author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 06/10.

Summary: "Work on assessing Treasury’s forecasting performance to date has focussed on comparisons against consensus forecasts. This study compares Treasury’s GDP and CPI forecast performance against individual private sector forecasters as well as major public sector institutions such as the IMF, OECD and the Reserve Bank of New Zealand. The head-to-head comparison makes it possible to assess Treasury’s forecasting performance relative to its peers. When compared across all evaluation periods covering 1996-2005, Treasury’s GDP forecast performance was ranked in the middle at seventh out of 16. The large forecast error for the 1998 year had a material impact on Treasury’s overall forecast performance. Treasury’s CPI forecast performance was not as good, placing tenth out of 12. Large forecast errors for the 1998-2000 period accounted for the poor CPI forecast performance. Treasury’s overall forecast performance was better when evaluating only the current year Budget forecasts, placing fourth for GDP and sixth for CPI. This suggests that Treasury is better at forecasting the current year than the year ahead. Consistent with international studies, no single forecaster consistently outperforms the Consensus, with Treasury beating the Mean 30% of the time for GDP and Consensus 33% of the time for CPI. All forecasters find it difficult to pick recessions and turning points. Large forecasting groups generally have a poorer forecasting record on average."--Publisher's website.

Holly Fletcher, the newbie, once stole a very important client away from Carrie, a fact that Carrie has never forgiven. Thrown together to make a presentation and trade show the best the company have ever seen, they must overcome their own obstacles and resentments to work together and build a working relationship that will make the company succeed. Add in a high mix of attraction and sexual chemistry, they struggle to fight the urges that push them together and the obstacles that pull them apart. Carrie's mistrust of Holly's motives and Holly's guilt over the accident that landed her younger sister in a facility for brain damaged adults, may have just left the bridge of doubt too insurmountable to find the happiness they both crave"--Provided by publisher.

Title: Understanding changes in the distribution of household Incomes in New Zealand between 1983-86 and 1995-98 / Dean Hyslop & Dave Maré.
Author: Hyslop, Dean Robert, 1962- author.
Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations
Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/21.
Summary: "This paper presents an analysis of changes in the distribution of gross household income and income inequality over the period 1983 - 1998. The analysis applies a semiparametric approach to study the effects of changes in the distribution of household types, and changes in National Superannuation (old age pension), household socio-demographic attributes and employment outcomes, and in the "economic returns" to such attributes and employment outcomes on the distribution of income, and uses kernel density methods to estimate these effects. This approach provides a visual appreciation of the shape of the income distribution, and is important in understanding how each of these factors affected different parts of the distribution over the period. We also estimate the effects of each of these factors on changes in various summary measures of inequality over the period. The results find that changes in household structure (particularly the declining proportion of two-parent families), attributes, and employment outcomes each contribute to the observed increase in inequality, while the changes in returns are estimated to reduce the level of inequality. Collectively these factors account for about 50 percent of the observed increase, depending on the measure of inequality used. The results confirm other research findings that the changes were concentrated during the late 1980s."--Publisher's website.

Understanding the growth in welfare benefit receipt in Britain: a review of the evidence / Robert Walker, Marilyn Howard, Sue Maguire, Rachel Youngs.

Walker, Robert, 1949- author.

1 online resource : illustrations

Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 00/23.

"This paper summarises the conclusions from a more extensive report commissioned by the Treasury and the Ministry of Social Policy to provide an explanation of growth in welfare benefit receipt in Britain in the period 1971 to 1997. The study is structured around a simple heuristic model of four sets of influences, 'drivers', the interaction of which helps to explain trends in claimant caseloads: the economy, demography, welfare institutions and belief systems. Four sets of claimants are considered: unemployed people, disabled people, retirement pensioners and children and families. It assembles a widely dispersed literature, in the first comprehensive review of the evidence on this issue."--Publisher's website.

Title  Wage and employment rates in New Zealand from 1991 to 2001 / Guyonne Kalb and Rosanna Scutella.

Author  Kalb, Guyonne, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 03/13.

Summary  "This paper presents results for five separately estimated sets of employment and wage equations. The New Zealand working-age population is divided into sole parents, single men, single women, married men and married women. The results for the wage equations are as anticipated and similar to the results in other countries. A higher education level, living in a city and age (up to the early forties) increase the expected wage. Wages also differ significantly across industries and occupations. Employment follows the expected patterns as well, where women with children are less likely to be employed; education increases the employment probability; and living in remote areas decreases employment. In addition to the usual variables, unemployment affects the probability of employment negatively and a clear upward time trend is observed for sole parents, living with one’s parents decreases the employment probability of singles but increases the probability for sole parents, and eligibility for the New Zealand Superannuation seems relevant in the employment decision."--Publisher's website.

Summary: "Germany 1944. Hunted for treason and the information he carries, Kristopher and Michel leave their safe house to journey across Germany toward Switzerland. Caught in a series of Allied bombings, they stop to help civilians and narrowly escape capture by German forces. While investigating a downed aircraft in the Black Forest, the two men discover an injured RAF pilot. After they are separated, Kristopher and the pilot are discovered by a German officer who claims he is not who he appears to be. Determined to find Michel again, Kristopher has to trust the stranger and hope the man is not connected to those hunting him. Meanwhile Michel is intercepted by one of the Allied soldiers he met in Berlin. His help is needed to save one of their own. Time quickly runs out, and loyalties are tested and betrayed as their enemies close in. Michel can only hope they reach safety before information is revealed that could compromise not only his and Kristopher's lives, but those of the remaining members of the Allied team - if it is not already too late."

Title  Women's participation in the labour force / Grant Johnston.
Author  Johnston, Grant, author.
Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 05/06.
Summary  "Labour force participation is a topical issue in New Zealand. It is well known that the participation of New Zealand women aged 25-39 is low in comparison with women in other OECD countries. There has been considerable interest in policies which might raise women's participation. This paper provides a base of information on women's labour force participation in New Zealand and in other OECD countries. The low participation of younger New Zealand women seems to be driven largely by a combination of relatively low participation rates among mothers with young children and sole mothers, together with high fertility rates and high proportions of sole parent families. However, while New Zealand women tend to leave the labour force when they have children, they also tend to return strongly to the labour force when their children get older. Considered over all ages, New Zealand has a reasonably healthy female participation rate, and the total quantity of work done in New Zealand, relative to the size of the working-age population, is amongst the highest in the OECD."--Publisher's website.

Title  Women's retirement incomes in New Zealand : a household bargaining approach / John Gibson, Trinh Le, Grant Scobie.

Author  Gibson, John, 1964- author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/22.

Summary  "Bargaining models of household wealth accumulation point to a potential conflict of interest between husbands and wives. Since wives are typically younger than their husbands and have longer life expectancy, they have to finance a longer expected retirement period. Thus, it is argued that when women have greater relative bargaining power, households will accumulate higher levels of wealth. However, in this paper, exactly the opposite pattern is reported for New Zealand. To explain this contradiction of the pattern reported in the literature, we construct a consumption smoothing model of saving for retirement. The results suggest that in this setting it may be rational for women with greater bargaining power to favour greater current consumption rather than wealth accumulation. These results indicate the importance of defining the policy context precisely when considering the implications of household bargaining models."--Publisher's website.

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;The way in which people balance their work and family responsibilities is becoming increasingly prominent on the policy agenda. This paper uses an economic framework to explore the rationale for government policies to improve work/family balance. It finds that strongest economic grounds for government intervention are the effects that maternal work may have on children. The evidence, however, is not strong, and whether maternal employment helps or harms children depends to a large part on the nature and quality of the childcare the children receive while the parents are at work. A number of policies could be used to promote work/family balance, including leave, childcare, changes to working hours, efforts to improve the family-friendliness of organisational cultures and tax/benefit policies. The most significant factor affecting work/family balance appears to be the organisational culture of the firm. In general, if organisational culture is not, in fact family-friendly, family-friendly measures will have little effect.&quot;--Publisher's website.</td>

Title  Workplace skills, technology adoption and firm productivity : a review / Sid Durbin.
Author  Durbin, Sid, author.
Physical Details  1 online resource
Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/16.
Summary  "The way that skills contribute to productivity improvements in firms is still something of a "black box". There is general agreement that human capital (broadly defined) is important for growth. Less is known about the ways in which skills and knowledge contribute to a firm’s pursuit of efficiency in production, the process of innovation and technology adoption, and to the take-up of market opportunities. This paper reviews literature on the types of skills utilised by firms, the mechanisms by which skills contribute to firm productivity, and how skills are acquired. It identifies potential policy implications relating to work based skills training."--Publisher's website.

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/03.
Summary  "This paper analyses the effects of a large reform in the minimum wages affecting youth workers in New Zealand since 2001. Prior to this reform, a youth minimum wage, applying to 16-19 year-olds, was set at 60% of the adult minimum. The reform had two components. First, it lowered the eligible age for the adult minimum wage from 20 to 18 years, and resulted in a 69 percent increase in the minimum wage for 18 and 19 year-olds. Second, the reform raised the youth minimum wage in two annual steps from 60% to 80% of the adult minimum, and resulted in a 41 percent increase in the minimum wage for 16 and 17 year-olds over a two-year period. We use data from the New Zealand Household Labour Force Survey (HLFS) to estimate the impact of these changes on a variety of labour market and related outcomes. We compare the average outcomes of these two groups of teenagers, before and after the policy reform, to those of 20-25 year-olds, who were unaffected by the reform. We find no robust evidence of adverse effects on youth employment or hours worked. In fact, we find stronger evidence of positive employment responses to the changes for both groups of teenagers, and that 16-17 year-olds increased their hours worked by 10-15 percent following the minimum wage changes. Given the absence of any adverse employment effects, we find significant increases in labour earnings and total income of teenagers relative to young adults. However, we do find some evidence of a decline in educational enrolment, and an increase in unemployment and inactivity, although these results depend on the specification adopted."--Publisher's website.

As the leaseholder’s daughter, Adriana Price holds a position of importance onboard the AUS Aquila. But not everything is as it seems. Death and danger have followed her from Old Earth, and Adi soon finds herself facing threats from every which way onboard the spaceship. Teaming up with the dashing and heroic Captain Hugo Tremblay, Adi finds a strength inside that defies the devastation and horror closing in from all directions. Courage and chivalry explode like supernovas, but can the civilian and captain truly win against an out of control, lethal artificial intelligence? And can any of them hope to survive the treacherous voyage to New Earth unscathed?"--Description.

Summary  "Rob’s journey began the day he walked into a medical center and walked out with a prescription for Ativan, one of the world’s most commonly-prescribed drugs. The highly-addictive benzodiazepine drug would change his life forever. It would lead this ‘accidental addict’ to a 13-year chemical dependency and a life eroded by its soul-sapping effects. This real-life account details the effects the drug had on his daily life, then plunges you into the merciless abyss of detox, tapering withdrawal and borderline madness that followed when Rob finally decided to free himself from the chemical clutches of “the Benzo Devil”--Publisher information.

Summary "Although New Zealand’s economy has long depended on the bodies and infant milk of animals, this country also has a hidden history of vegetarianism. While some early vegetarians were concerned with health, spirituality, and purity, others took a broader view, speaking out on issues that included peace, feminism, animal rights, socialism, prison reform, and the environment. Yet others set up cafes, organised picnics, and wrote cookbooks. The Compassionate Contrarians uncovers the quirks of the vegetarian experience in a land of meat and dairy. More importantly, it acknowledges the hard work and courage of a group of idealists who dedicated their lives to creating a more just world for all sentient beings."--Publisher information.

Summary  "In this paper, I address three questions of government financial policy: how should a government's aversion to financial risk be determined, when are new financial investments justified, and what is the optimal level of reserves in a flexible exchange rate regime. To answer these questions, I modify an integrated financial model developed by Froot and Stein (1998) to describe private sector financial policy. Financial risk aversion in this model is due to the potential of poor financial returns limiting an institution's future investment opportunities. The potential for poor returns provides governments with incentives to hold reserves and limit new financial investments."--Publisher's website.

Title The living standards, incomes and accommodation costs of older New Zealanders revisited / Roger Hurnard, Dean Hyslop and Ivan Tuckwell.
Author Hurnard, Roger, author.
Physical Details 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)
Series Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 05/03.
Summary "In 2001 the then Ministry of Social Policy published a comprehensive study of the living standards of older New Zealanders. The current paper revisits the estimated relationship between material well-being and the current income and accommodation costs of older people, and questions the extent to which income and accommodation costs directly affect well-being or proxy for other factors. We first extend the estimated relationship between material well-being and current income to include the source of the income as well as its level. We find that controlling for different income sources roughly halves the estimated associative effect of income on material well-being. Furthermore, for a given level of income, those with higher fractions of either employment earnings or capital investment income have significantly higher material well-being scores, while those with a higher fraction of income from benefit allowances have lower scores. One interpretation is that these factors may proxy for other causal factors, such as health and wealth effects, rather than reflecting a direct income effect. Next, we extend the original specification between material well-being and accommodation costs to, first, include property rates as an accommodation cost and, second, to control for the type of housing tenure (freehold homeowner, mortgaged, renter, and no accommodation costs). We find that, controlling for housing tenure, the estimated effect of accommodation costs (including rates) is, at most, half that originally estimated and, for some specifications, insignificantly different from zero. Furthermore, controlling for the level of accommodation costs, mortgage holders and renters have significantly lower material well-being scores than freehold homeowners. These findings suggest that understanding what influences the material well-being outcomes of older people is not as straightforward as might be suggested by the simple association of certain variables."--Publisher's website.

<td>&quot;The methodology for the study involves determining the nature and amount of economic welfare gains and losses resulting from the privatisation of New Zealand Rail, and the incidence among groups in society. The study measures the welfare change that is attributable to the change of ownership. To do this, the study assesses actual economic results against three 'counterfactuals' - analyses of what would have happened if NZ Rail had stayed in public ownership.&quot;--Publisher's website.</td>

Summary: "Lucia's health is rapidly deteriorating, and she must leave the Dark Realm and travel to the Light side before she becomes gravely ill. Chello takes her to the water's edge of the great river separating the realms. He can go no further as his powers are the antithesis to the Light Realm. Lucia insists that he help her cross the river, but once Chello sets foot in the Light Realm, the land becomes violent with massive storms and high winds uprooting everything in their path. Together they run for their lives, but Lucia's health is failing, and she is unable to keep up with Chello. Chello has no alternative but to leave her and return to the Dark side before the light side is frozen in time for a thousand years. Chello leaves, the storm abates, and Lucia sleeps in the undergrowth until she is woken by Father Michael" -- Authors website.

Title: The rebirth / Kim Beatrice.
Author: Beatrice, Kim, 1961- author.
Publishing Details: [Pahiatua] : [Kim Beatrice], [2018] ©2018
Physical Details: 1 online resource
Summary: "An Angel in the Undergrowth: The Rebirth is set in two conflicting realms, a Dark Realm and a Light Realm. Lucia Puccini is born a golden Angel and is part mortal and part mythical. Legend says Lucia's fate is that she will die, but her mother's beliefs differ and she gives her daughter to the undergrowth where she will be safe. Sixteen years later, Lucia is rebirthed and faces many challenges in adjusting to her new life. Chello Barleti is also mortal and mythical and is a guardian of the Dark Realms. His ancestors and family are trapped by a curse and to release the curse he must become a gothic knight. Chello lives in a 17th Century church ruin sanctuary where his ancestors and living family visit. Otto, an ogre and Chello's companion helps with the rebirthings and Chello's tasks. Mythicals living in the Dark Realm are given the opportunity to choose to live as a mortal on the Light side or remain as a mythical on the Dark side. If they stay there are rules and consequences if the rules are broken" -- Author's website.

Title: A structural VAR approach to estimating budget balance targets / Robert A Buckle, Kunhong Kim & Julie Tam.

Author: Buckle, Robert, author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 01/11.

Summary: "The Fiscal Responsibility Act 1994 states that, as a principle of responsible fiscal management, a New Zealand government should ensure total Crown debt is at a prudent level by ensuring total operating expenses do not exceed total operating revenues. In this paper a structural VAR model is estimated to evaluate the impact on the government's cash operating surplus (or budget balance) of four independent disturbances: supply, fiscal, real private demand, and nominal disturbances. Based on the distribution of these disturbances, stochastic simulations are undertaken to derive the level of the ex ante cash budget balance needed to achieve an actual cash budget balance, at a given level of probability, at some future time horizon."--Publisher's website.

Title: A structural VAR model of the New Zealand business cycle / Robert A Buckle, Kunhong Kim, Heather Kirkham, Nathan McLellan and Jared Sharma.

Author: Buckle, Robert, author.

Physical Details: 1 online resource : illustrations (some colour)

Series: Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 02/26.

Summary: "This paper develops a new open economy structural VAR model of the New Zealand economy. The model adopts techniques introduced by Cushman and Zha (1997) and Dungey and Pagan (2000) to identify international and domestic shocks and dynamic responses to these shocks in a small open economy. The international variables are block exogenous and the model includes restrictions on contemporaneous and lagged variables. Novel features include the introduction of an expanded set of domestic financial variables not captured in previous New Zealand VAR models, the use of a forward looking Taylor Rule to identify monetary policy, and the introduction of a climate variable to capture the impact of climatic conditions on the business cycle. Key results to emerge are the significant influence of international variables on the New Zealand business cycle, the importance of separately identifying import price and export price shocks, and the significant influence of climate."--Publisher's website.

Title  “Managing for outcomes” in the New Zealand public management system / Anna-Luis Cook.

Author  Cook, Anna-Luis, author.

Physical Details  1 online resource : colour illustrations

Series  Treasury working paper (New Zealand. Treasury) ; 04/15.

Summary  "Managing for Outcomes is the process by which central agencies and Ministers are seeking to promote a results focus within the New Zealand public management system. This paper argues that if a results focus is to truly be introduced to the New Zealand public management system then all aspects of the wider system will need to be amended, in order to support a general cultural change. In promoting this view the paper provides a summary of the system as it currently stands and considers how the structural, financial, strategic and performance management elements of the wider public management system could be amended to support an outcomes focus within the core New Zealand public service."--Publisher's website.
