The New Zealand National Bibliography (NZNB) contains catalogue records for the New Zealand imprint. It is produced monthly (12 issues per year). The National Library of New Zealand has responsibility for producing the Bibliography. Most of the material listed is received by the National Library of New Zealand under the Legal Deposit provisions of the National Library (Te Puna Mātauranga o Aotearoa) Act 2003. It contains New Zealand and Tokelau resources, both physical and digital, including books, serials, newspapers, maps, music, websites and podcasts. Items are included after they have been received at the National Library. The records are created in accordance with international cataloguing standards.

This document contains all the items that have been catalogued during the month of December 2020. The items are grouped by format and then separated into digital and physical. Within each format grouping the items are arranged alphabetically by title.

Summary  "Fiona Kidman's early stories about New Zealand women's experiences scandalised readers with their vivid depictions of the heartbreaks and joys of desire, illicit liaisons and unconventional love. Her writing made her a feminist icon in the early 1980s, and she has since continued to tell the realities of women's lives, her books resonating with many readers over the years and across the world. To mark her 80th birthday, this volume brings together a variety of her previously published stories as well as several that are new or previously uncollected; all moving, insightful and written with love. The final stories trace her own history of love, a memoir of significant people from childhood and beyond"--Publisher information.

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;This collection of the best of seven years of author Deborah Makarios’s blog frolics hilariously through the alphanumeric system, from Adventures in Fantastical Taxidermy (how to make a severed Jabberwock head of your very own) to 10 Reasons Why Cuttlefish Are Amazing. Along the way it takes in the madness of crochet hook sizing, cats and their assorted lunacies, shopping for swimwear, the unfortunate end to the author's brief stint as a Disneyesque princess, and, of course, why she has the ambition of a potato. Bonus material appearing only in this book includes eight ways to fail to assassinate Fidel Castro and three ways to react to the assassination of a royal relative, as well as a soupçon of non-assassinatory content&quot;--Publisher information.</td>

Title  The applicability of micro finance to higher risk business ventures : an experimental study / Jeremy Clark, John Spraggon.
Creator Clark, Jeremy (Jeremy Edmund)
Format 1 online resource : illustrations, some colour
Summary "This paper reports the results of a micro finance lab experiment that seeks first to replicate the difference in loan repayment rates between groups composed of high vs. low risk borrowers, and then to test a mechanism we propose to make micro finance work better for high risk borrowers. The mechanism involves revenue sharing among members of a borrowing group, above and beyond usual repayment bailouts that successful members can choose to make on behalf of unsuccessful members. Revenue sharing makes repayment of the total group loan optimal under more business outcome states, and thus increases the expected benefit of repaying the current loan to qualify for future ones. We compare loan repayment rates between high and low risk borrowing groups, with and without the option of entering into binding ex ante agreements to revenue share. For high risk borrowers, we further test the effect of allowing them to renege on revenue sharing agreements once individual business outcomes are known. We are able to capture the result that loan repayment rates are lower for higher risk borrowers than for lower risk borrowers. We also find that introducing the option of binding revenue sharing agreements modestly but significantly increases loan repayment rates. Most of this gain is lost, however, when successful individuals can renege on commitments to revenue share after learning individual business outcomes. Keywords: Micro finance; Revenue sharing; Profit sharing; Risk"--Page [ii].

Format  1 online resource : illustrations
Summary  "We explore the value of private investment information using data from a singular source: auctions of yearling racehorses. Horse breeders possess superior information about their own horses and have strong financial incentives to buy the best of these back at auction. However, those they repurchase subsequently perform significantly worse on average, earning 30% less at the racetrack than horses purchased by out-siders. Moreover, this underperformance is concentrated in male horses, despite these being purchased exclusively for racing purposes. These puzzling findings can-not be explained by differences in horse risk or breeder abilities, or by non-financial objectives, or by behavioral or selection biases. Keywords: auctions; racehorses; buybacks"--Page [ii].

Further tests of Ahn, Khandelwal, and Wei's (2011) model of intermediated trade / Jianhua Duan, Xuefeng Qian, Kuntal K. Das, Laura Meriluoto, W. Robert Reed.

Title Gas appliances. Part 1.12, Gas pool heaters.

Ahn, Khandelwal, and Wei's (2011) model of intermediated trade is subjected to a series of additional tests. Using data mostly sourced independently from AKW, the authors are able to reproduce the evidence supporting their three main predictions for Chinese exports. However, further tests reveal that these results are not robust. When more recently available data are used to re-analyze the evidence supporting the first prediction, the authors estimate coefficients that are wrong-signed and significant. Similarly, when re-analyzing the evidence supporting the second and third predictions, they find that the full sample results mask significant heterogeneity across Chinese regions. In many cases, key coefficients are insignificant. In a few cases, they are wrong-signed and significant. Finally, they find that there are multiple versions of a key variable measuring the number of required import documents by country, and that results are not robust across versions. Keywords: Intermediaries, Exports, Productivity, Heterogeneous firms, China.

Summary  Erin inherits a cottage in a remote village from a grandmother she’s never met. Considering how much she longs to get away from the unexciting life stretching out in front of her, this might be a dream come true. Except that it’s a village full of witches and Druids practising an ancient religion passed down through the centuries, and the priestess leading it is the calm, uncanny death worker Morghan Wilde. Life is different in Wilde Grove, with ownership of the cottage coming with a non-negotiable condition, and it’s one Erin’s not sure she can meet, or even if she should. She must choose to believe in the unbelievable - and then learn how to do magic too. Only then will she be able to claim her inheritance. It’s an inheritance that is so much more than a cottage in the woods”--Author’s website.

Title: How do firms make capital structure decisions when facing big events? : the case of Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) / Mona Yaghoubi, Reza Yaghoubi, Graeme Guthrie.
Creator: Yaghoubi, Mona.
Format: 1 online resource : illustrations
Summary: "In this paper we investigate the financing behaviour of Hospital Corporation of America (HCA) for the years 1990 to 2013. We study the variations in HCA’s market and book leverage ratios due to 1) mergers and acquisitions, and divestitures that change a firm’s total assets, 2) buybacks, and 3) leveraged buyouts and public offerings [sic] that change the firm’s ownership. We scrutinize HCA’s market and book leverage ratios’ variations independently as well as relative to each other during the same periods of time. We find that i) HCA’s management team used HCA’s excess cash from divestitures to repurchase $1.7 billion of HCA’s stocks and they also called about $1.35 billion of HCA’s debt, ii) HCA’s market leverage ratio tends to stay in a target leverage zone, and iii) in some years HCA’s management team used the book leverage ratio as a tool to keep the market leverage ratio inside a target leverage zone. Keywords: Capital structure dynamics, share buyback, leveraged buyout, mergers and acquisitions, initial public offerings"--Page [ii].

Summary: "This publication is the outcome of an urgent Waitangi Tribunal inquiry into alleged acts and omissions of the Crown in relation to kōhanga reo, in particular concerning the report of the Government's Early Childhood Education Taskforce and the potential development of Government policy which would affect the operation and support of kōhanga reo. Kōhanga reo provide a total immersion Māori language and whānau development programme for children from birth to five years of age and their whānau. The claimants alleged that the Crown had acted in a manner inconsistent with the principles of the Treaty of Waitangi with respect to a range of issues affecting the relationship between the Crown and kōhanga reo and the ability of kōhanga reo to operate effectively in ensuring the transmission of the Māori language and culture. It was also alleged that actions and omissions of the Crown, had led to a decline in the number of kōhanga reo and the number of children enrolled in them. The Tribunal made recommendations aimed at addressing the extremely vulnerable state of the Māori language and the kōhanga reo movement and the serious threat that this posed for the survival of te reo Māori as a living language"--Publisher information.

Summary  We propose a flow-based explanation for two long-standing anomalies in empirical finance – the Sell in May effect and the January effect. We find that the aggregate mutual fund flows exhibit similar seasonal patterns as stock returns. The Sell in May effect becomes insignificant in standard statistical tests after controlling for the impact of mutual fund flows on returns, with flow explaining about 54% of the variation in excess returns over the winter months. We also find that flow helps explaining the abnormally high returns of small-cap stocks in January. The Sell in May and January effects appear to be primarily a retail money effect. Similarly, the well-known co-movement between flow and market return is only present in retail fund flow. Overall, the evidence suggests that unanticipated rather than expected flow drives our results. Keywords: Mutual funds, Fund flows, Return seasonality"--Page [ii].

Summary: "This publication is the outcome of an urgent Waitangi Tribunal inquiry into Crown actions during and after negotiations to settle the historical claims of Taranaki Whānui ki te Upoko o te Ika in the Port Nicholson block. The claim was submitted under the Treaty of Waitangi Act 1975 by Taranaki Whānui and concerned the Crown's proposed settlement package with Ngāti Toa Rangatira. The claimants alleged that aspects of the settlement package broke undertakings that the Crown had previously made to them. The Tribunal found that the Crown had breached the Treaty of Waitangi by offering Ngāti Toa a plaque at Parliament and a right of first refusal over Crown properties and New Zealand Transport Agency administered properties in Wellington City"--Publisher information.

Title The relative announcement effects of ordinary dividends, special dividends and share buybacks in New Zealand / Warwick Anderson, Wen Kang.

Creator Anderson, Warwick.

Format 1 online resource

Summary "This study first examines investor reactions to three types of cash disbursement announcement in the New Zealand context: increases in ordinary dividends, notification of special dividends, and the first disclosure of a share repurchase programme. Secondly it investigates whether the disbursement type is influenced by any company characteristic. Event study methodology is employed. The market model is used to create abnormal returns (ARs) on the dates of the announcements and these ARs are then subjected to T-tests and then a Kuskal-Wallis test to determine if they differ across the three announcement types. Given that dividends and earnings are announced simultaneously, a restricted least squares regression procedure is used to separate these two effects out. A multinomial logistic regression is then used to determine if any inherent company characteristic (size, leverage, liquidity risk, profitability level) influences a company’s choice of disbursement type. In the New Zealand context, investors react more dramatically to announced increases in ordinary dividends and special dividends than to announcements of share buybacks. With respect to the influence of company characteristics, share buybacks tend to be a disbursement preference for larger companies. The findings provide no support for any preference for buybacks as a substitute for dividends in the New Zealand context. This study breaks new ground in considering the relative attractiveness of the three disbursement types in New Zealand. Keywords: Event Study, Ordinary Dividends, Special Dividends, Share Repurchases, Company Characteristics"--Page [ii].

This study replicates Zigraiova and Havranek’s (2016) meta-analysis of banking competition and financial stability. It performs three types of replications: a “Reproduction” replication where Z&H’s data and code are verified to reproduce the results of their study; a “Repetition” replication where the studies used by Z&H are independently recoded and then re-analyzed; and an “Extension” replication, where 35 additional studies on banking competition and stability are examined to see if they confirm Z&H’s findings. Our replication analyses confirm Z&H’s main finding that competition in the banking sector is unrelated to financial stability. However, we do not confirm their finding of publication selection in the “Extension” replication, and both “Repetition” and “Extension” replications fail to confirm most of Z&H’s findings about the effects of data, estimation, and study characteristics on estimated competition effects. While our “Repetition” replication produced a high match rate with Z&H’s data, we found that the meta-regression analysis was substantively impacted by discrepancies between the original and recoded data. We conclude that meta-regression analyses should be viewed with caution. We also demonstrate that “best practice” estimates can be precarious and highly dependent on variable specification and how “best practice” is defined. They like wise should be viewed with caution. Our study highlights the value-added that replication brings to meta-analyses. While some of Z&H’s results were found to not be robust, the fact that all three types of replications confirmed Z&H’s main finding about competition and stability provides strong evidence that this finding can be regarded with confidence.

Title Spillovers and exports : a meta-analysis / Jianhua Duan, Kuntal K. Das, Laura Meriluoto, W. Robert Reed.

Creator Duan, Jianhua.

Format 1 online resource : illustrations, some colour

Summary "This study uses meta-analysis to analyze the empirical literature on spillovers and exports. It collects 3,291 estimated spillover effects from 99 studies. The estimated spillover effects in the literature span a large number of types and measures of both exports and spillovers. As a result, we transform estimates to partial correlation coefficients (PCCs). We analyze these transformed effects using four different versions of Weighted Least Squares estimators, incorporating both meta-analytic “Fixed Effects” and “Random Effects”. Our analysis produces three main findings. First, while we estimate a mean overall effect of spillovers on exports that is statistically significant, the size of the effect is economically negligible. Second, we find evidence of positive publication bias using conventional Funnel Asymmetry Tests. However, the size of the estimated publication bias is small, and disappears in some regressions when other explanatory variables are included in the analysis. Third, using both Bayesian Model Averaging and frequentist WLS estimation, we find that some data, estimation, and study characteristics are significant in some regressions. However, only a few of the characteristics are robust, and none are large in size. Keywords: Spillovers, Exports, Meta-analysis; Meta-Regression Analysis; Bayesian Model Averaging, Partial Correlation Coefficient"--Page [ii].

Summary
"Like many adopted children, filmmaker Barbara Sumner yearned to know who her mother was. New Zealand's closed adoption laws made that almost impossible and coloured her chaotic adolescence and adult life. When she finally tracked her mother down, a longed-for reunion ended in tragedy. This memoir explores Sumner's conviction that everyone who loses their mother suffers some degree of physiological damage. They are all grafted onto the tree of strangers."--Publisher information.

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;From the earliest days of European settlement in New Zealand, Māori have struggled to hold on to their land. Tensions began early, arising from disputed land sales. When open conflict between Māori and Imperial forces broke out in the 1840s and 1860s, the struggles only intensified. For both sides, land was at the heart of the conflict, one that casts a long shadow over race relations in modern-day New Zealand. 'Wars without end' is the first book to approach this contentious subject from a Māori point of view, focusing on the Māori resolve to maintain possession&quot;--Publisher information.</td>

Summary  "Harper's best friend Valerie is everything she is not: beautiful, confident, and the most powerful witch on Banks Peninsula. Together, they run the coffee shop «La Petite Sorcière» and keep the balance between magic, people, and the environment. It's an honour for Harper to be Valerie's sidekick, if only they weren't in love with the same man: dolphin whisperer Ethan. Friends before magic (or boys) has always been their prerogative, but their determination to hold onto it is tested when a local scientist finds out about their secret and makes Valerie a tempting offer. Harper's envy and feelings of inferiority lead to a massive fall-out between the two friends that might put both their lives at risk. Yet, when push comes to shove, Harper is willing to give up everything for her friend: Ethan, her life, or even the little magic she has. Set in Akaroa Harbour, this witchy novella takes you on a magical trip of swimming with the dolphins. It is a story about love, the ocean, and most importantly, friendship"--Back cover.

Summary  "I have concentrated on the hegemonic world view that prevails around the globe today. It is one based on the traditions and philosophies of the Northern hemisphere and Graeco-Judeo-Christian beliefs ... This book is about a speculative art form, world bending, not just for ourselves, but also for the nonhuman majority, with the aspiration to make better worlds together. Before we materially construct anything, we must aesthetically take action, imaginatively and creatively engaging with both the organic and inorganic things all around us "--Introduction.

Title You’ll never walk alone: the effects of walkability on pregnancy behaviors and outcomes / Karen S. Conway, Andrea K. Menclova.

Creator Conway, Karen Smith.

Publishing Details Christchurch, New Zealand: Department of Economics and Finance, School of Business, University of Canterbury, 2018.

Format 1 online resource: illustrations, some colour

Summary This study investigates the relationship between local walkability and physical activity and subsequent health outcomes among pregnant women – for whom walking is the recommended, and by far most common, form of exercise. Using an EPA measure of walkability at the county level and rich individual-level data on women from the 2011 BRFSS, we find that higher walkability translates into more physical activity among pregnant women (but not their non-pregnant counterparts). Furthermore, we also demonstrate that higher walkability leads to better pregnancy outcomes for both mothers and their babies. Using 2011 Natality Detail Files with geographic identifiers, we show that women residing in more walkable counties are less likely to experience gestational diabetes, hypertension, and excessive weight gain. They are also less likely to deliver macrosomic babies. Our study suggests more broadly that pregnant women’s physical activity responds to factors that facilitate it and makes a difference. Keywords: Walkability, exercise, health outcomes, pregnancy

Summary "Despite the chaos and me being a dumpster fire, things turned out okay last time. We beat the villain, and I'm part of a superteam. I have cool friends, and somehow (don't jinx it, Dylan), I even got the girl. Things should be great, right? Now the government's come knocking, and we're summoned to superhero school. Which is a dream come true, except it's run by a corporation. It's fine, if you can get over the teeny, tiny problem that there's also an evolution-obsessed organisation trying to figure us out. Plus, there's another group of mutants with dangerous powers running loose, and we're the ones who'll have to stop them. I hope the part on my school records that says "near-pathological disregard for authority" isn't going to come back and bite me. Maybe it'll be the thing that saves us"--Author's website.

Title: Common ground: garden histories of Aotearoa / Matt Morris.
Creator: Morris, Matt, (Sustainability advisor).
ISBN: 9781988592572 paperback
Format: 276 pages: illustrations (some colour) ; 24 cm
Summary: Common Ground: Garden histories of Aotearoa takes a loving look at gardens and garden practices in Aotearoa New Zealand over time. While a lot of gardening books focus on the grand plantings of wealthy citizens, Matt Morris explores the historical processes behind 'humble gardens' - those created and maintained by ordinary people. From the arrival of the earliest Polynesian settlers carrying precious seeds and cuttings, through early settler gardens to 'Dig for Victory' efforts, he traces the collapse and renewal of home gardening culture, through the emergence of community initiatives to the recent concept of food sovereignty. Compost, Maori gardens, the suburban vege patch, the rise of soil toxin levels, the role of native plants and City Beautiful movements … Morris looks at the ways in which cultural meanings have been inscribed in the land through our gardening practices over time. What do our gardens say about us, and where we have been? Matt Morris digs deep in Common Ground.

Summary  "Muskets, potatoes and other introductions fundamentally altered the balance of power in 19th-century Aotearoa, leading to inter-iwi conflicts over almost 40 years that claimed tens of thousands of lives (killing, wounding or displacing up to half of the Māori population). Distinguished author and lawyer Ron Crosby brilliantly rewrites his seminal 'The Musket Wars' on a thematic basis, simplifying it to a concise new work full of maps and illustrations for the general reader. Years of presentations to schools and groups is reflected in this dynamic new approach. This important book will further understanding of how the boom of muskets continues to echo in New Zealand today. And it needs to - the wars are still neglected

Summary

"This document sets a framework for geographic information service ontology and the description of geographic information Web services in Web Ontology Language (OWL). OWL is the language adopted for ontologies. This document makes use of service metadata (ISO 19115-1) and service definitions (ISO 19119) whenever appropriate. This document does not define semantics operators, rules for ontologies, and does not develop any application ontology. In relation to ISO 19101-1:2014, 6.2, this document defines and formalizes the following purpose of the ISO geographic information reference model: -- geographic information service components and their behaviour for data processing purposes over the Web, and -- OWL ontologies to cast ISO/TC 211 standards to benefit from and support the Semantic Web."--www.infostore.saiglobal.com.

Creator Kopruch, Hans, 1958-

ISBN 9780473546731 paperback

Publishing Details Waikanae, New Zealand: Niche Market Publication, [2020]

Format 427 pages; 22 cm

Summary "The Kāpiti Way of Being is a novel and training book in one. The story makes you visit the most beautiful spots on the Kāpiti Coast, whilst listening to fascinating discussions about the way people tick, how they think, feel and act. You will dive into deep discussions with the members of a walking group to solve the issues of the moment, schooling, academia, the economy, political systems and politicians, and whatever other topics usually come to the fore when people meet. The Kāpiti Way of Being is a call to activate the Silent Majority not to become the Silenced Majority and to stand assertive, open and kind in the wake of a Noisy Minority. It is a call to resist the restriction of language in the name of political correctness, so that we can all have open and informed discussions about the things that really matter. Without certain words, we cannot say certain things and, more importantly, cannot think in certain ways"—Back cover.

Title Lecretia's choice : a story of love, death and the law / Matt Vickers.

Creator Vickers, Matt.

ISBN 9781925355598 paperback

Format 336 pages : colour illustrations ; 27 cm

Summary A successful young lawyer in Wellington, N.Z., Lecretia Seales met and fell in love with Matt Vickers in 2003. In 'Lecretia's choice,' Matt tells the story of their life together, and how it changed when his proud, fiercely independent wife was diagnosed with a brain tumour and forced to confront her own mortality. The death she faced-slow, painful, dependent-was completely at odds with how she had lived her life. Lecretia wanted to die with dignity, to be able to say goodbye well, and not to suffer unnecessarily-but the law denied her that choice. With her characteristic spirit, she decided to mount a challenge in New Zealand's High Court, but as the battle raged, Lecretia's strength faded. She died on 5 June 2015, at the age of forty-two, the day after her family learned that the court had ruled against her. 'Lecretia's choice' is not only a moving love story but compulsory reading for everyone who cares about the dignity we afford terminally ill people who want to die on their own terms.

ISBN  9781775506331 print
Projected Publication Date  2105
Format  pages cm
Summary  "Let Their Light So Shine follows the growth of the Mormon Church from a 'fledgling New Zealand Church' to a 'Māori Church' and, finally, to becoming part of the global organisation The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The recollections from direct descendants of leaders in the Church in New Zealand highlight the accomplishments and influences of these twelve men: Matene Rutatenga, James Elkington, William Roberts, Steve Watene, Pateriki Te Rei, Ian Garry, Kenneth Palmer, Nitama Paewai, Geoffrey Garlick, Ben Couch, Douglas Martin and Te Puoho Katene. Moving from the 1800s to 2010, the histories of these leaders record their experiences within the Church, their communities and their families and enable their inspiring stories to be preserved for future generations. This is the third book in the series about early leaders in the Mormon Church in New Zealand, following Turning the Hearts of the Children and By Their Fruits You Will Know Them."--Publisher information.

<td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;Life with Cars is a like a national family photo album, albeit one with its focus on cars. It brims with evocative imagery of cars and automotive adventures from the 1950s to the 1980s, with the words of the contributors as told to the author. Their stories reflect New Zealanders' creation and uptake of car culture - telling of breakdowns in the middle of nowhere, holidays at the beach, evading the law, Sunday drives and of course posing on, beside or in the much-loved four-wheeled family members. Underpinning these stories are relationships - primarily between owners and their cars, but also between parents and children, partners in life, and young people and their peers - all during a time when cars had character, there was less congestion on the roads and petrol was cheap.&quot;--Publishers website.</td>

He travels the country taking casual jobs and making casual friends, according to his 'system [of] hard work for the good time and never stay anywhere long'. The good times disappear when the impact of the Depression is felt; casual work is replaced by the tedium of labour gangs. Johnson becomes embroiled in a riot in Auckland and escapes to an isolated farm where he endures grinding poverty and relentless toil in the company of the morose Stenning and his wife Rua. An affair with Rua leads to a struggle between Johnson and Stenning in which the latter is shot. Johnson escapes again, this time into the rugged Kaimanawas - an ordeal he barely survives. Summary "Introduction - Sarah Hudson Te toto o te tangata he kai; te oranga o te tangata, he whenua, he oneone While food provides the blood in our veins, our wellbeing is drawn from the land and soils Our tipuna used whenua as an art material, as medicine and in ceremony. The variety of colour in the earth pigments they had at their fingertips challenges the common understanding of 'Maori colours' being red white and black. This spectrum of earthy colour is at home on our fingertips, a gift of whakapapa from PapatOanuku, Hinetuparimaunga, Parawhenuamea and Hineukurangi Making paint with whenua as our ancestors did has low environmental impact and is an exercise in tino rangatiratanga. It connects us to the whenua in a very visceral way, connecting us to place, our tipuna and nga atua. -- I am Sarah Hudson; a Ngati Awa and Ngai Titihoe mum, artist. curator and researcher based in Whakatane. I've been investigating earth pigments with the rope Kauae Raro Research Collective since 2019 The collective was ignited as we visited wahi tapu within our rohe that for us, solidified the importance and longevity of working with whenua as a means of visual communication These sites of rock art and ceremony are long lasting illustrations that we come from a rich lineage of artists; that art is an important part of being Maori As a researcher and practicing artist. I've found information about how our tipuna used earth pigments to be more accessible than information about how contemporary Maori artists are using these resources This 'under-the-radar' status of the contemporary use of earth pigments was a motivating factor to build whanaungatanga between Maori artists working with whenua and create a publication that gives examples of the continuation of this practice. This publication documents a group of contemporary Maori artists who participated in the Mana Whenua project, an art and matauranga exchange I initiated over the course of Matariki 2020 The artists were sent a postcard painted with earth pigments, with a few questions on the back relating to their practice. They were also sent paper, Kauri gum, Tarata gum, honey, raw and processed pigments; everything they might need to create paint from the whenua. The artists were asked to create a postcard sized artwork painted with earth pigment, answer the questions, and post it back to me in Whakatane. The following pages contain the initial postcard which was sent out to each artist, and the resulting responses. Please enjoy the breadth of knowledge, innovation, and creativity from a cross-section of contemporary Maori artists using whenua in their art practices. Maria Whenua was made possible by Creative New Zealand's 'Arts Continuity Grant', which supported arts projects during COVID-19.---Provided by publisher.

Title  Mind out / Pamela Gervai.

Creator  Gervai, Pamela.

ISBN  9780473539375 paperback

Format  336 pages ; 23 cm

Summary  "a story of romance and of heroism against odds; the more so because the difficulties arise from within the main characters. They are forced to confront and overcome divisions within themselves or lose their advanced minds, and worse, their lives to a dark force. This is a novel set at the end of the 21st Century when the human mind has developed to an extraordinary extent. The setting is New Zealand - a fractured country which has since times of prehistory forced challenges on its inhabitants that have created warriors, driven to powerful conquest. Now in this modern futuristic time, history is repeated as the challenges of old permit the development of mentally powerful beings. The fractures have not been banished. They remain, running just as deep but in a form that is different and more dangerous. There is no guarantee of survival for the two protagonists – or if they do survive, whether they will ever be quite the same..."--Publisher's website.

Creator Farrell, Fiona, 1947-
ISBN 1988592534
9781988592534 hardback
Format 211 pages ; 21 cm
Summary "One of New Zealand's most versatile writers, Fiona Farrell has published four collections of poetry over 25 years, from Cutting Out (1987) to The Broken Book (2011). Nouns, verbs, etc. collects the best work from these books, and intersperses them with other poems thus far 'uncollected'. The themes are wide ranging: political and personal, regional and global, including love and birth and death, war and emigration, history and landscape. The poems mix lyricism with the flat and plainspoken mode of Kiwi vernacular; they channel voices infrequently heard in poetry in traditional song and ballad forms. They are well crafted but unpretentious, jokey yet illuminating, self-deprecating but wise, sad and funny and deeply human."--Publisher description.

ISBN 9780473511753 paperback
Format 255 pages colour illustrations ; 21 cm
Summary "Thoughtful, witty, and well-researched, PenguinKind is a comprehensive book to guide you through the hundreds of small lifestyle changes required to live safely and sustainably in the new normal. You will be surprised at how easily it becomes second nature to use a safety razor instead of disposable alternatives, measure laundry detergent rather than free-flow pouring, time your showers, make your own condiments, think outside the gift box, transform used coffee grounds into a face scrub, wrap gifts with your own art, and make sorbet from browning bananas. Peppered among the chapters are stories about penguins and their quirky ways. As the indicator species for ocean health, penguins are represented in this book as the ambassadors for all wildlife, to remind us that we are on a treacherous path and must take action to get off it. Proceeds from PenguinKind will help fund scientific research and conservation tracking through Global Penguin Society and NZ Penguin Initiative. PenguinKind is packed with stories of Carolyn’s personal journey towards sustainability, falling in love with the farm boy next door after 30 years apart, and implementing all 500 of the small sustainable actions. These are woven with stunning penguin photography by Richard Robinson and delightful illustrations by Italian fashion illustrator Andrea Tarella. Summary  "After a lifetime of being held back by illness, blogger Brooke Griffiths is finally healthy enough to pursue her dream of hiking to Mt Everest base camp. The first step in her plan is convincing professional adventurer Jack Farrelly to help her prepare. Only, they exchanged a mind-blowing kiss weeks ago, and he never called, which in a town the size of Haven Bay, is downright awkward. All she has to do is put her pride aside to achieve her goal. Should be easy - right? Jack Farrelly dated a woman in the public eye before, and he doesn't care to repeat the experience, no matter how tempting Brooke is. Though the instructor in him wants to help her get ready to hike Mt Everest, he thinks she's better off setting her sights a little lower. But denying her proves impossible - both professionally and personally - and before long, he's in deeper than he ever imagined possible"--Back cover.

"From the earliest days of European settlement in New Zealand, Māori have struggled to hold on to their land. Tensions began early, arising from disputed land sales. When open conflict between Māori and Imperial forces broke out in the 1840s and 1860s, the struggles only intensified. For both sides, land was at the heart of the conflict, one that casts a long shadow over race relations in modern-day New Zealand. 'Wars without end' is the first book to approach this contentious subject from a Māori point of view, focusing on the Māori resolve to maintain possession"--Publisher information.

Together, they run the coffee shop »La Petite Sorcière« and keep the balance between magic, people, and the environment. It's an honour for Harper to be Valerie's sidekick, if only they weren't in love with the same man: dolphin whisperer Ethan. Friends before magic (or boys) has always been their prerogative, but their determination to hold onto it is tested when a local scientist finds out about their secret and makes Valerie a tempting offer. Harper's envy and feelings of inferiority lead to a massive fall-out between the two friends that might put both their lives at risk. Yet, when push comes to shove, Harper is willing to give up everything for her friend: Ethan, her life, or even the little magic she has. Summary  "Anxious artists in quarantine experiencing a powerful need for new motivation. Trapped in their own bubbles, opportunities to collaborate and create meaningful music are suddenly way more precious than they were in the past. And so, the family of It’s Already Tomorrow is born. The fruits of a long-distance lockdown collaboration from New Zealand producers and guest performers living in Germany, Greece, Serbia, and home in Aotearoa New Zealand. From introspective ambient tracks to hybrid folk-electronica to dystopian synth-rock, this album refuses easy categorisation. But one thing across all the emotional intensity is a strong placement in the immediate historic moment. This music is from right now by artists profoundly living and feeling the convulsions in the world around them. The future’s here, now what? ... <td>Summary</td>
<td>&quot;The lyrics to these songs come from a poetry collection by the Auckland poet, playwright and paediatrician Renee Liang. Renee, a second-generation Chinese New Zealander, named the collection Banana after a sometimes pejorative term for Asians in Western societies (i.e. yellow on the outside, white on the inside) ... I chose to set seven for this song cycle - two about grandparent-grandchild relationships (experience and spiders), two about the bond between parent and child (Warsaw Concerto and To my sister), and three &quot;Mental notes&quot; - short observations on the ephemera of life&quot;--Programme note.</td>
